The Graf Zeppelin crossed the coast of France today, completing the ocean stage of a stormy voyage over the Atlantic and setting a record for a fast crossing by a dirigible.

The dirigible crossed the coast 59 hours and 31 minutes after she left Lakehurst, N. J., at 1:54 A. M. Monday. Only one eastward crossing of the Atlantic had been made previously by an airship. That was the British R-34, which took 75 hours from Mineola, N. Y., to Pelham, England.

The Zeppelin headed inland from Rochlet, France, where she crossed the coast, and passed over Nantes. She was headed for LeBourget Field, Paris, which she expected to reach about midnight, 7 P. M. EST.

The dirigible, largest airship yet in commission, and the first trans-Atlantic air liner, was near the end of a spectacular round trip flight from Friedrichshafen, Germany, to Lakehurst, N. J., carrying passengers both ways.

On the present trip the Graf Zeppelin has aboard 24 passengers, including several Americans, a crew of 40, and one stowaway, Clarence Terhune, a youthful American.

When she reached the French coast, she had covered approximately 3,600 miles from Lakehurst. The actual distance flown probably was more than that, due to deviations from her course. Her average speed was between 60 and 65 miles an hour.

The Zeppelin dipped as she reached the coast at Rochlet to establish her position, but Dr. Eckener pointed the dirigible's nose upward again as soon as he was certain of his course.

The hum of the motors brought fishermen tumbling from their cottages and crowds filled the streets at the nearby coast resort of St. Bervin. The Zeppelin headed straight towards Nantes.

The weather from Nantes towards Paris was excellent.

(By United Press)

The Graf Zeppelin approached the coast of Europe today, triumphant over the October storms of the North Atlantic. It promised to break all speed records for a dirigible crossing of the ocean.

At 5:50 A. M. EST, 52 hours after she left Lakehurst, N. J., the first ocean passenger dirigible was sighted off the Bay of Biscay on her return journey to Friedrichshafen, Germany.

At that hour, the Graf Zeppelin was reported by the British steamer Boulderpool in latitude 45.51 north, longitude 11. west. The position given is off the Bay of Biscay, approximately 200 miles from the northwestern tip of Spain.

Shortly afterwards, Berlin authorities received a report by radio placing the Graf Zeppelin in almost the same position at 6 A. M.

At a speed of 65 miles an hour, which was the dirigible's average across the ocean, she should reach her home port 950 miles away, in about 14 hours or about 8 P. M. EST.

Reports from ships at sea and from the dirigible herself indicated the airship had encountered winds of gale force almost all the way across the Atlantic. Strong winds blew today off the coast of Ireland and along the approximate course of the dirigible.

At 11 A. M. the Graf Zeppelin had been gone from Lakehurst 57 hours. The distance by the northern ship route from Lakehurst to Friedrichshafen is about 4,100 miles. Reports of her progress yesterday, however, indicated the Zeppelin had done considerable zig-zagging over the North Atlantic to avoid storms. It is probable, therefore, that her total traveling distance will be about 4,400 to 4,500 miles.

Reports of her progress indicated that the Zeppelin, after leaving the American coast near Chatham, Mass., had steered northeast, close to Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, until she reached the 50th parallel of latitude. She apparently followed that parallel across the sea, dodging north or south of it as weather conditions made advisable.

As she neared the southwest coast of Ireland, the Zeppelin began dropping.

Landslides threatened the Ticino valley, and bursting of the wreckage barrier from recent slides which formed a lake seemed imminent. The Swiss federal council ordered army engineers to mobilize and erect protective barriers in the danger zone and to clear and repair roads and railroads.

SUCCUMBED TO HEART TROUBLE WHICH ATTACKED HIM ON OCT. 5

Washington, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—The scrolls of dead among the world's wartime statesmen today bore a new name, that of Robert Lansing.

President Wilson's secretary of state died here rather suddenly late yesterday of heart trouble which attacked him only on Oct. 5. Today men high in public life in this and other lands paid tribute to Lansing who directed much of the diplomatic destinies of this country in the days from 1915 to 1920 and sat with Clemenceau, Lloyd-George, Orlando, Henry White, Gen. Bliss and others in the peace councils of Paris.

Funeral services for Lansing will be held at his residence tomorrow at 4 P. M., it was announced today. Burial will be at Brookside cemetery, Watertown, N. Y., Friday.

President Coolidge, sending condolences to Mrs. Lansing, spoke of the famous international lawyer as one who had done a work in war and peace that would "assure him a place in history."

The writer sat in Lansing's office in the state department the day the secretary sent to Germany his first sharp warning note. Germany had declared a "barred zone" around the British Isles and had advised this country against sending its ships into that area.

Germany disregarded this counsel, and finally in November, 1918, capitulated, thoroughly defeated. The outcome of the war might have been vastly different if Germany had hearkened then to the Lansing warning or to his subsequent notes.

Lansing, it is believed, would have preferred originally to see this country kept out of war, but he was said to have altered sharply in this viewpoint after the Lusitania was sunk.

The first break between Lansing and President Wilson came during Wilson's illness when Lansing virtually took over the reins of the government. It was believed that the president became incensed over Lansing's calling a cabinet meeting before Dr. Cary Grayson, the president's physician, to determine the exact state of Wilson's health.

The coolness between Wilson and Lansing was accentuated by Lansing's reported opposition to America's entry into the League of Nations at a time when the president was campaigning for such entry. Several sharp letters finally passed between the secretary and the president, and Lansing's resignation was demanded received in 1920.

After that Lansing joined with Lester Woolsey, who had been the solicitor of the state department, in opening law offices. Lansing was retained by the Chinese and Chilean governments and by other large interests in important international matters.

He was popular socially, and during his term in office was known as one of Washington's foremost "diners out."

Lansing was born in Watertown, N. Y., in 1864, was graduated from Amherst College, and admitted to the New York bar in 1889.

He leaves his widow, Eleanor, who was the daughter of John W. Foster, secretary of state in the Benjamin Harrison administration.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—An appeal by democrats to George Eastman, head of the Eastman Kodak Company here, for a campaign contribution brought the following reply from Eastman to Treasurer Jas. W. Girard of the democratic national committee:

"The affairs of this country cannot be carried on by ballyhoo and unkeepable promises. It is unfortunate for the country that your party should be emphasizing these things which have no place in government."

Eastman expressed surprise that he should have been solicited by the democrats in view of the fact that he is a republican presidential elector and a contributor of $25,000 to the Hoover campaign fund.

St. Paul, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—At one of the most brilliant social functions of the past year Miss Laura Ellen Volstead and Carl J. Lomen, reindeer king of Nome, Alaska, were married here last night in the House of Hope church.

The daughter of Andrew J. Volstead, father of the prohibition law, had as her matron of honor, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general, while Roy Squires of Chicago attended Lomen. More than 1,000 guests were present.

Immediately following the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Henry Chapman Swearingen, pastor of the House of Hope, and a formal reception in the church parlors, the Lomen departed for a trip through the east. They will make their home in New York.

BY HOLD-UP MAN

St. Paul, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Although shot and killed, apparently by a "dum-dum" bullet, Joseph T. Driscoll, world war veteran, successfully defended 75 cents from a hold-up man here last night.

Driscoll's body was found on a side-street near the loop district shortly after he had left for home from the hospital where he was employed as engineer. Police announced that the shooting undoubtedly was the result of an attempted hold-up but Driscoll's widow said the 75 cents found in his pocket was all the money he carried.

Hospital authorities declared today that the man was shot with a soft-nosed bullet that spread as it struck its victim.

St. Paul, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Despite close political races in several congressional districts of Minnesota, campaign expenditures of the various candidates, as reported today in a Washington dispatch, reveal only average financial outlays.

In the closely contested battle in the first district, Dr. J. F. Lynn, Waseca, democrat, reported receipts and expenditures of $2,238 as compared to $500 received and spent by Victor Christman, republican of Austin.

Other contributions and expenditures were: Frank Clague, Redwood Falls, second district, no contributions, expenses $712; third district, A. H. Andresen, republican of Red Wing, contributions $600, expenditures $1,035, C. C. Kolars, democrat, LeSueur Center expenditures $412; sixth district, Harold Knutson, St. Cloud, republican, no receipts, no expenditures; eighth district, W. A. Pittenger, Duluth, republican, contributions $1,400, reportable expenditures $1,000, and ninth district, C. G. Selvig, Crookston, republican, contributions $1,064, expenses $732 and $320 personal expenses.

St. Paul, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Arthur E. Nelson, republican candidate for the United States senate, today marshalled his forces for the last week of the drive against his farmer-labor opponent, Henrik Shipstead, incumbent.

Nelson today was scheduled to invade the dairy-farming district of southern Minnesota with speeches scheduled at Rochester, Chatfield, Spring Valley and Stewartville. The battle in the Twin Cities and central Minnesota was to be carried on however, by Governor Christianson, Lieutenant Governor Nolan, State Treasurer Schmah and Attorney General Youngquist.

The state office holders joined on Tuesday night over the radio in their first formal declarations of support for Nelson.

No further developments were forthcoming today from Senator Shipstead's radio charges yesterday that the republican organization had circulated through the state a pamphlet containing a "deliberate falsehood." The alleged statement referred to by Shipstead is believed to be that he "favors the candidacy of Governor Smith."

Meanwhile, Nelson announced that he had accepted conditionally the challenge to debate by Arthur Lundeen, farm-labor candidate for governor. Lundeen announced last week that he would take up the republican candidate's challenge to Shipstead for a debate.

Nelson said he requested Lundeen by telegram to announce whether he has Shipstead's endorsement to represent him in the debate.

JENKS SAYS HE

Minneapolis, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Dr. Albert E. Jenks, University of Minnesota anthropologist, declared in a lecture here Tuesday night that during the past summer he had found traces of a vanished race of Americans in the Mimbres valley, New Mexico.

Bits of evidence unearthed revealed, the scientist said, that the people lived during the time of Christ but disappeared completely about 700 years ago.

"What became of them is a mystery," Dr. Jenks said, "there were no evidences of a battle and no signs that they had migrated to another country."

New York, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—A wager of $130,000 on Herbert Hoover at 5 to 1 odds was reported in the stock exchange today.

Brokers reported that the last hours of the campaign were finding betting increasing at a brisk pace. Odds were at four to one and three and one-half to one for Hoover to win.

Among the wagers recorded was one of $14,000 against $10,000 that the entire New York state democratic state ticket, exclusive of judgeships, would be victorious.

FINAL SERIES OF SPEECHES TO BE DELIVERED IN NEW-

FROM SAME PLATFORM WHERE
HOOVER SPOKE THREE WEEKS AGO

(By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent))

New York, Oct. 31.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith set out today on the concluding drive of his presidential campaign. He laid aside his brown derby, denied himself to callers and finished the first of the final series of campaign speeches which is to be delivered in Newark, N. J., tonight from the same platform where his republican opponent, Herbert Hoover, spoke three weeks ago.

A change appeared to have come over the democratic nominee since his return from his Baltimore trip. There was grim seriousness in his mien, a disinclination to waste one of these final precious moments with one of those familiar epigrams which characterize his intimate conversation. He was all business.

His friends recognized the tenseness which they said has always absorbed the governor's activities in the closing moments of his gubernatorial campaigns here.

He is closing his national campaign according to the precise custom of his gubernatorial races. On Friday nights before election he always has spoken at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, the Saturday nights he always has had a final big rally in Madison Square Garden. On Monday nights, election eve, he always has left his hotel home and gone down into Oliver street, on the east side, where he was born, to mingle with his old friends and swap stories about his chances.

This is exactly his program for this year.

The New Jersey speech tonight will be the only one not devoted to that "lucky program" he always has followed. It will deal with labor issues of the campaign, particularly the use of injunctions in labor disputes. The Brooklyn speech will be devoted to the cause of the state democratic ticket and the Madison Square Garden meeting will be the last big rally, a summing-up of the evidence in the case he has laid before the nation's voters.

There is to be a brief radio talk from his hotel Monday night over a national radio network, but it will be confined to expressions of appreciation to his friends and the suggestion that they all get to vote early the next day.

Smith is to receive the election returns over a United Press wire, and private wires from democratic headquarters, which will be strung into the living room of his suite.

The governor will motor to Newark for the meeting tonight, through the New Holland tubes, under the Hudson river. Crowds are expected to greet him on his informal parade through Jersey City and parts of Newark. He will return here immediately after the speech.

LATTER PUTTING ON A WHIRL-
WIND FINISH IN EASTERN
TERRITORY

HOOVER PLANS FINAL DETAILS
OF CAMPAIGN WIND-UP
ARRANGEMENTS

(By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent))

Washington, Oct. 31.—Herbert Hoover is participating with his republican board of strategy in mapping out plans to combat the predicted "whirlwind" finish of Governor Alfred E. Smith's eastern campaign.

The republican candidate will devote attention in the next two days here, before his departure for the west at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, to the final details of campaign wind-up arrangements.

The final republican campaign strategy in the east revolves principally about a concerted attack by a far-flung line of campaign orators, headed by Senator Borah of Idaho and former Secretary of State Chas. Evans Hughes, against the principal bulwark of Smith's eastern defense, prohibition modification.

While Hoover remains out of the picture as far as mention of prohibition is concerned, these speakers, especially Borah and Hughes, will attack Smith on his own battleground on the issue that appears to have stirred up most interest in the east. They are telling the voters that Smith can do nothing about changing the law, while the democratic candidate shouts back that he can.

Along the sides of the main prohibition battle line, other republican leaders will emphasize the "prosperity" issue.

The democratic national committee took notice of Borah's prohibition campaign today in a statement that he had voted to uphold President Wilson's veto of the Volstead act in 1919.

Hoover is maintaining the course he adopted at the outset as to his personal campaign. He will not be drawn into any debate with Smith in these last few days, despite the apparent intention of the New York governor to challenge him directly. The democratic candidate's Baltimore speech, in which he attempted to hook Hoover, by association, and the republican national committee, directly with campaign activities of the Ku Klux Klan, brought no comment from Hoover.

In a statement made public here, Daniel E. Pomeroy, national vice-chairman of the committee and New Jersey national committeeman, denied Smith's charge that a Klan meeting in New Jersey had been held "in conjunction with the republican national committee."

"The situation referred to by Gov. Smith in his speech last night was a deliberately laid plot by individuals misrepresenting themselves," Pomeroy declared.

The special campaign train for California will leave here tomorrow. Mrs. Hoover and her son, Allan, will accompany the nominee to California and will participate in the receptions for the candidate on the way.

A prediction that Hoover would carry New York because of the huge increase in the up-state vote and that he would be elected president was made today by Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., who called upon the republican candidate to bid him goodbye.

"The great silent vote will be strongly for Hoover because that vote goes to the man who promises the nation the most safe and sane administration," Roosevelt said.

Children March Orderly
as School House Burns

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Marching in orderly fashion into the cold outdoors, twenty children were led to safety today when their country schoolhouse, a one story frame building, eight miles west of here, was destroyed by fire.

Ranging in age from six years up, the children heeded the admonition of their teacher, John Carmine, not to stampede.

Here are twenty-six of the twenty-seven Allen A. Knitting Mill strikers at Kenosha, Wis., who have been sentenced wholesale to serve six months in the Milwaukee House of Correction for their unanimous defiance of Federal Judge F. A. Geiger's order to pay fines of $100 and costs by October 29, assessed when the judge found them guilty of violating a federal injunction against picketing at the Kenosha mills. As a large scale gesture of protest against what they consider to be injustice, these twenty-seven persons have agreed to go to jail rather than pay the fine.

'ONE-MAN WOMAN'

Los Angeles, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Claire Windsor, screen actress, was granted a final decree of divorce from Bert Lytell, film player, in superior court yesterday. They were married at Juarez, Mexico, in May, 1925. "I'm through being a one-man woman," the actress said. "Boy friends? Yes, as long as they are plural."

NELSON TO INVADE DAIRY-FARM-ING DISTRICT OF SOUTHERN MINNESOTA

St. Paul, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Arthur E. Nelson, republican candidate for the United States senate, today marshalled his forces for the last week of the drive against his farmer-labor opponent, Henrik Shipstead, incumbent.

Nelson today was scheduled to invade the dairy-farming district of southern Minnesota with speeches scheduled at Rochester, Chatfield, Spring Valley and Stewartville. The battle in the Twin Cities and central Minnesota was to be carried on however, by Governor Christianson, Lieutenant Governor Nolan, State Treasurer Schmah and Attorney General Youngquist.

The state office holders joined on Tuesday night over the radio in their first formal declarations of support for Nelson.

No further developments were forthcoming today from Senator Shipstead's radio charges yesterday that the republican organization had circulated through the state a pamphlet containing a "deliberate falsehood." The alleged statement referred to by Shipstead is believed to be that he "favors the candidacy of Governor Smith."

Meanwhile, Nelson announced that he had accepted conditionally the challenge to debate by Arthur Lundeen, farmer-labor candidate for governor. Lundeen announced last week that he would take up the republican candidate's challenge to Shipstead for a debate.

Nelson said he requested Lundeen by telegram to announce whether he has Shipstead's endorsement to represent him in the debate.

JENKS SAYS HE FOUND TRACE OF VANISHED RACE

Minneapolis, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Dr. Albert E. Jenks, University of Minnesota anthropologist, declared in a lecture here Tuesday night that during the past summer he had found traces of a vanished race of Americans in the Mimbres valley, New Mexico.

Bits of evidence unearthed revealed, the scientist said, that the people lived during the time of Christ but disappeared completely about 700 years ago.

"What became of them is a mystery," Dr. Jenks said, "there were no evidences of a battle and no signs that they had migrated to another country."

New York, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—A wager of $130,000 on Herbert Hoover at 5 to 1 odds was reported in the stock exchange today.

Brokers reported that the last hours of the campaign were finding betting increasing at a brisk pace. Odds were at four to one and three and one-half to one for Hoover to win.

Among the wagers recorded was one of $14,000 against $10,000 that the entire New York state democratic state ticket, exclusive of judgeships, would be victorious.

ON LAST DRIVE OF HIS CAMPAIGN

FINAL SERIES OF SPEECHES TO BE DELIVERED IN NEW-
ARK, N. J.

FROM SAME PLATFORM WHERE
HOOVER SPOKE THREE WEEKS AGO

By PAUL R. MALLON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Oct. 31.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith set out today on the concluding drive of his presidential campaign. He laid aside his brown derby, denied himself to callers and finished the first of the final series of campaign speeches which is to be delivered in Newark, N. J., tonight from the same platform where his republican opponent, Herbert Hoover, spoke three weeks ago.

A change appeared to have come over the democratic nominee since his return from his Baltimore trip. There was grim seriousness in his mien, a disinclination to waste one of these final precious moments with one of those familiar epigrams which characterize his intimate conversation. He was all business.

His friends recognized the tenseness which they said has always absorbed the governor's activities in the closing moments of his gubernatorial campaigns here.

He is closing his national campaign according to the precise custom of his gubernatorial races. On Friday nights before election he always has spoken at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, the Saturday night he always has had a final big rally in Madison Square Garden. On Monday nights, election eve, he always has left his hotel home and gone down into Oliver street, on the east side, where he was born, to mingle with his old friends and swap stories about his chances.

This is exactly his program for this year.

The New Jersey speech tonight will be the only one not devoted to that "lucky program" he always has followed. It will deal with labor issues of the campaign, particularly the use of injunctions in labor disputes. The Brooklyn speech will be devoted to the cause of the state democratic ticket and the Madison Square Garden meeting will be the last big rally, a summing-up of the evidence in the case he has laid before the nation's voters.

There is to be a brief radio talk from his hotel Monday night over a national radio network, but it will be confined to expressions of appreciation to his friends and the suggestion that they all get to vote early the next day.

Smith is to receive the election returns over a United Press wire, and private wires from democratic headquarters, which will be strung into the living room of his suite.

The governor will motor to Newark for the meeting tonight, through the New Holland tubes, under the Hudson river. Crowds are expected to greet him on his informal parade through Jersey City and parts of Newark. He will return here immediately after the speech.

MAP PLANS TO COMBAT
GOV. SMITH

LATTER PUTTING ON A WHIRL-
WIND FINISH IN EASTERN
TERRITORY

HOOVER PLANS FINAL DETAILS
OF CAMPAIGN WIND-UP
ARRANGEMENTS

By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Oct. 31.—Herbert Hoover is participating with his republican board of strategy in mapping out plans to combat the predicted "whirlwind" finish of Governor Alfred E. Smith's eastern campaign.

The republican candidate will devote attention in the next two days here, before his departure for the west at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, to the final details of campaign wind-up arrangements.

The final republican campaign strategy in the east revolves principally about a concerted attack by a far-flung line of campaign orators, headed by Senator Borah of Idaho and former Secretary of State Chas. Evans Hughes, against the principal bulwark of Smith's eastern defense, prohibition modification.

While Hoover remains out of the picture as far as mention of prohibition is concerned, these speakers, especially Borah and Hughes, will attack Smith on his own battleground on the issue that appears to have stirred up most interest in the east. They are telling the voters that Smith can do nothing about changing the law, while the democratic candidate shouts back that he can.

Along the sides of the main prohibition battle line, other republican leaders will emphasize the "prosperity" issue.

The democratic national committee took notice of Borah's prohibition campaign today in a statement that he had voted to uphold President Wilson's veto of the Volstead act in 1919.

Hoover is maintaining the course he adopted at the outset as to his personal campaign. He will not be drawn into any debate with Smith in these last few days, despite the apparent intention of the New York governor to challenge him directly. The democratic candidate's Baltimore speech, in which he attempted to hook Hoover, by association, and the republican national committee, directly with campaign activities of the Ku Klux Klan, brought no comment from Hoover.

In a statement made public here, Daniel E. Pomeroy, national vice-chairman of the committee and New Jersey national committeeman, denied Smith's charge that a Klan meeting in New Jersey had been held "in conjunction with the republican national committee."

"The situation referred to by Gov. Smith in his speech last night was a deliberately laid plot by individuals misrepresenting themselves," Pomeroy declared.

The special campaign train for California will leave here tomorrow. Mrs. Hoover and her son, Allan, will accompany the nominee to California and will participate in the receptions for the candidate on the way.

A prediction that Hoover would carry New York because of the huge increase in the up-state vote and that he would be elected president was made today by Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., who called upon the republican candidate to bid him goodbye.

"The great silent vote will be strongly for Hoover because that vote goes to the man who promises the nation the most safe and sane administration," Roosevelt said.

Children March Orderly
as School House Burns

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Marching in orderly fashion into the cold outdoors, twenty children were led to safety today when their country schoolhouse, a one story frame building, eight miles west of here, was destroyed by fire.

Ranging in age from six years up, the children heeded the admonition of their teacher, John Carmine, not to stampede.

MILL STRIKERS GIVEN SIX MONTHS' SENTENCE

Here are twenty-six of the twenty-seven Allen A. knitting mill strikers at Kenosha, Wis., who have been sentenced wholesale to serve six months in the Milwaukee House of Correction for their unanimous defiance of Federal Judge F. A. Geiger's order to pay fines of $100 and costs by October 29, assessed when the judge found them guilty of violating a federal injunction against picketing at the Kenosha mills. As a large scale gesture of protest against what they consider to be injustice, these twenty-seven persons have agreed to go to jail rather than pay the fine.

SAVED FROM DROWNING

C. J. Werner Rescued by John Beck in Twin Island Lake Sunday

A drowning was averted Sunday at Twin Island lake when John Beck was able to help his companion, C. J. Werner, to extricate himself from clinging mud when their duck boat tipped over. The two men, both employees of the J. C. Penney company, were hunting in a rice bed when the accident occurred. The reeds impeded the progress of the boat and Werner, who was rowing, pulled hard with an oar to try to move the boat. The pull put the men off balance and the boat tipped throwing both men into the water.

Beck fell into the lake where the bottom was fairly hard and was able to help himself and a few strokes took him back to the boat. He reached out his hand to Werner who found himself unable to move and up to his neck in water. His feet were stuck in the mucky bottom and the weight of heavy rubber boots and a heavy hunting jacket handicapped him greatly. With Beck's help Werner was finally able to free his feet from the muck and the two men made their way to shore. Werner lost his gun in the accident but after some search the men were able to locate it.

TELLS OF DISAPPEARANCE

Passenger States That Robert Trent Was Missed Thirty Minutes Out of Ketchikan

A letter received by George Trent, Jr., this morning from his brother, Clyde, of Kirkland, Wash., threw more light on the disappearance of Robert Trent. The letter stated that Luce, the man that was on the hunting trip with Robert Trent and that took the same boat for the United States with Trent, called upon Clyde Trent in Kirkland and told all he knew in connection with the disappearance.

Luce stated that Trent was apparently in the best of health when he embarked on the boat at Cordova but soon after boarding the boat he became violently seasick and retired to his stateroom and remained there during the four day trip to Ketchikan, where Trent was last seen. He ate nothing, Luce stated, during the four days trip between Cordova and Ketchikan.

Upon arriving in Ketchikan the passengers had time to go ashore. Luce went to Trent's room and told him that he was going ashore and asked Trent if he didn't care to go along. Trent answered that he would rather remain in his bunk and so Luce went ashore alone. Upon returning to the boat Luce stayed on deck for about 30 minutes after the boat got under way again before he went to the stateroom and when he got there Trent was gone. When he could not find Trent he notified authorities who immediately instituted a search.

It is the belief that if Trent drowned it must have been close to the shore near Ketchikan and that the tide will eventually bring the body in. The Trents have posted a $100 reward for the recovery of the body so that the many fishermen of that vicinity will be on the lookout for it.

CITY TO CELEBRATE HALLOWE'EN TONIGHT

Brainerd prepared today to celebrate Halloween tonight.

Stores reported a heavy demand for soap, apples, pumpkins, balloons, confetti, ribbons, colored handkerchiefs. Downtown store proprietors neglected to have their windows washed today, knowing that tomorrow their store windows would be soaped for them.

Police urged merry-makers to restrict their fun to keep within the law. Time has wrecked one fun on Halloween—that of taking gates off hinges in front yard fences. There are no gates any more. The age of progress has further wrecked additional favorite pastimes on this night.

Parties are to be held in several homes throughout Brainerd while families will celebrate in an enjoyable way in their own homes.

TEACHERS ENTERTAIN

Faculty of Harrison School Hosts to Entire Corps of Teachers of Brainerd Schools

The faculty of the Harrison school entertained the entire corps of teachers of the Brainerd schools last evening in the Harrison building with a Halloween party. More than 60 people were present to enjoy the contest and stunts that featured the evening's entertainment. Apple balancing contests and other feasting calling for a steady hand and dexterity brought much laughter from those that witnessed the stunts as well as those that took part in them.

The building was very prettily decorated with jack-o-lanterns, pumpkins, posters, orange and black crepe paper. Here and there paper witches, cats and owls were distributed to give the party that "spooky" atmosphere that is so characteristic of Halloween. Pumpkin pie a la mode and coffee were served in keeping with the evening's entertainment. The pumpkin pie may have been served to keep the time of the year in mind while the coffee undoubtedly served its purpose in keeping the teachers awake to remember the ghosts and goblins.

The new Buick is the new Style

Men and women on every street-- in every city and town--are pronouncing the new BUICK with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher, the most beautiful automobile of the day.

Never before in the history of motor car manufacture have the motorists of America welcomed any new automobile as they are welcoming the Silver Anniversary Buick with new Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher!

Sweeping into the market at a time when motor car lines were practically standardized—when imitation was destroying individuality—these epic Buick creations introduced an entirely new mode—

A mode of body-symmetry—of size and magnificence—of soft contours instead of straight lines—of embossed side and hood panels involving the most costly steel paneling work employed on any car in the world!

And as the weeks have passed—and the full significance of Buick's achievement has become apparent to the public—enthusiasm for this car has swelled and grown to unprecedented proportions!

Buick sales records have been broken! Production schedules have been increased again and again! The great Buick plants are working to the limit of their capacity to supply the demand.

CITY TO CELEBRATE HALLOWE'EN TONIGHT

Brainerd prepared today to celebrate Halloween tonight.

Stores reported a heavy demand for soap, apples, pumpkins, balloons, confetti, ribbons, colored handkerchiefs. Downtown store proprietors neglected to have their windows washed today, knowing that tomorrow their store windows would be soaped for them.

Police urged merrymakers to restrict their fun to keep within the law. Time has wrecked one fun on Halloween—that of taking gates off hinges in front yard fences. There are no gates any more. The age of progress has further wrecked additional favorite pastimes on this night.

Parties are to be held in several homes throughout Brainerd while families will celebrate in an enjoyable way in their own homes.

TEACHERS ENTERTAIN

Faculty of Harrison School Hosts to Entire Corps of Teachers of Brainerd Schools

The faculty of the Harrison school entertained the entire corps of teachers of the Brainerd schools last evening in the Harrison building with a Halloween party. More than 60 people were present to enjoy the contest and stunts that featured the evening's entertainment. Apple balancing contests and other feats calling for a steady hand and dexterity brought much laughter from those that witnessed the stunts as well as those that took part in them.

The building was very prettily decorated with jack-o-lanterns, pumpkins, posters, orange and black crepe paper. Here and there paper witches, cats and owls were distributed to give the party that "spooky" atmosphere that is so characteristic of Halloween.

Pumpkin pie a la mode and coffee were served in keeping with the evening's entertainment. The pumpkin pie may have been served to keep the time of the year in mind while the coffee undoubtedly served its purpose in keeping the teachers awake to remember the ghosts and goblins.

First Baptist Crusaders

All crusaders or juniors who wish to become crusaders of the First Baptist church, will have their first meeting Thursday afternoon after school, at the home of Carol Mosier. Those wishing to attend this meeting are asked to meet at the church.

The new Buick is the new Style

Men and women on every street-- in every city and town-- are pronouncing the new BUICK with Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher, the most beautiful automobile of the day.

Never before in the history of motor car manufacture have the motorists of America welcomed any new automobile as they are welcoming the Silver Anniversary Buick with new Masterpiece Bodies by Fisher!

Sweeping into the market at a time when motor car lines were practically standardized—when imitation was destroying individuality—these epic Buick creations introduced an entirely new mode—

A mode of body-symmetry—of size and magnificence—of soft contours instead of straight lines—of embossed side and hood panels involving the most costly steel paneling work employed on any car in the world!

And as the weeks have passed—and the full significance of Buick's achievement has become apparent to the public—enthusiasm for this car has swelled and grown to unprecedented proportions!

Buick sales records have been broken! Production schedules have been increased again and again! The great Buick plants are working to the limit of their capacity to supply the demand.

Story Featured in Minneapolis Journal Tells of Brush With Fort Snelling Cavalry

OLD HERO OF TRIBE ALIVE

Tells His Version of Affair to Bess M. Wilson, Well Known Writer

Bess M. Wilson, writing in the Minneapolis Journal, tells of a brush of Mille Lacs Indians with Fort Snelling cavalry years ago and the version given by an old Indian, who participated in the affair.

In an Indian cabin on the shores of Lake Mille Lacs sits an aged Indian unimpaired of the present, but peering with eager pride back into youth, when he was a gallant Chippewa hunter, sought by the white man's law because he had killed a white soldier. The charge against him, placed on government records in 1857, still stands, but the old man is unafraid and unashamed. Instead he insists in the liquid language of the Chippewa, "me-nah-day-nah-mo," (I am proud.)

The old man is Sha-go-ba, sole survivor of the Cornstalk war in which two troops of cavalry from Fort Snelling conquered six Chippewa warriors who had no intention of being warriors until the troops appeared and thrust war upon them. It is all set down in history—that Sha-go-ba shot the only white man killed in the fray, that he was the only one held for punishment, and that he made an easy escape in the days when jail facilities were not adequate to cope with Indian cunning.

Outlives Other Principals

Now the men who hunted him, the sheriff who had him in charge and his companions in the "war" are gone. But Sha-go-ba lives on, how old no one knows, the object of pride and loving care by his grandchildren and the hero of a small army of great and great-grandchildren.

"Ne-we-sah-gus-wah" (I will smoke), he says. A fair skinned great granddaughter fills the strong black pipe and her own daughter, blue-eyed and fair-haired, gives it to the old man with a timid and reverent word in Chippewa. Even the smallest member of the group understands the story and is proud of the old man who outlives his sons and still remembers the exciting days when the Indians and the white men were not always friends.

The six hunters, all young Chippewas, had been on the hunt several days, and tales of their misdoings had reached Fort Snelling. So magnified was the story as to the number of Indians in the group that two troops of cavalry were sent to put an end to their depredations. Overtaking the Chippewas near the Sunrise river in Chisago county, two troopers were sent forward as an advance guard and they marched back to the camp the whole Chippewa "army" of six young braves.

Dr. Folwell says "their leader evidently took in the situation and gave a signal. Instantly the Indians dropped their blankets and sprang over a neighboring board fence into a field of standing corn. Beyond it lay a piece of woodland toward which the flight was directed. In the short chase that led to the capture of the Indians, Trooper Frank Donnelly was killed.

"One of the Chippewa, Sha-go-ba by name," says Dr. Folwell, "turned leveled his gun and shot Donnelly through the arm and body. He died in a few minutes. Then there was firing from both sides and one Indian was killed and one wounded. Escape now being impossible the survivors of the battle surrendered."

Sha-go-ba was turned over to the sheriff of Chisago county, but the sheriff had no jail in which to put the "criminal." So the Indian was taken to the sheriff's home, where he was kept.

"Choosing a favorable moment," Dr. Folwell wrote, "Sha-go-ba broke jail, swam the St. Croix and disappeared in the tall timber of Wisconsin. So ended the Cornstalk war." Basing his statement on newspapers of the day, Dr. Folwell says: "The action of the court seems to have met with public approval."

Denies Swimming River
Sha-go-ba's story, told with pantomime that would do credit to a motion picture star, agrees with the written account exactly until it comes to the swimming of the river. Then, in response to a question from the interpreter, he shakes his head and there comes across his face a gleam of Indian cunning and a slow smile of satisfaction in having tricked the white man. In crisp sentences, he goes on to tell that he found the river too wide to swim, so he followed the shore to where a "lot of boats cross it."

Evidently, in the opinion of those who have followed the story with care, these boats were the pontoon bridge which at that time crossed the river at Marine. Then Sha-go-ba followed the east shore through the timber to where Proscott now stands. There he crossed the river again, and made his way to Mille Lacs, where he has lived since, undisturbed by the fact that he is an outlaw.

Born on the shores of Mille Lacs, coming back to it for hiding after his adventures, and with all his children born there, Sha-go-ba has no desire except to die there and be buried in the old Indian cemetery where his people have been buried for centuries. With others of his tribe he was ordered to the White Earth reservation at Cass Lake, the government taking decisive steps to force this removal several years ago. As often as they were taken, the Indians came back, one aged man walking the entire distance three times.

In desperation the government was forced to establish a sub-agency at Mille Lacs.

"They will never leave this lake," says Harry D. Ayer, agent of the Indian trading post at Vineland. "Sha-go-ba is one of four old men left out of the 20 who were the heads of the tribe when I came here in 1916."

"The Indians never will be farmers, but they always will be good craftsmen under training. We employ from 12 to 20 around the trading post all the time."

FIRST AIR STOWAWAY IN HISTORY

Clarence Terhune, 20-year-old St. Louis lad, who was discovered a stowaway among the mail bags of the Graf Zeppelin a few hours after the start of its voyage to Germany. During the latter part of the two years since his disappearance from home, he has been employed as a caddy at the Rye, N. Y., Country club, and has taken an intense interest in aviation activities. A cable from Germany stated that the entire country was stirred by the news of Terhune's feat in boarding the ship through the mail hatch and that a great welcome was being planned for the plucky youth. It is an old superstition that a stowaway assures safe passage, so Friedrichshafen is wishing the American boy, at present a dishwasher, good luck. This picture was rushed from St. Louis over telephone wires.

Can You Look About?

When you wake up in the morning can you clearly, honestly, without evasion of self-deceit, face the facts in your life? Can you look forward toward what you expect to do without shame or fear of doubt? If there is real contentment in this world it comes from this ability to face all the facts and to proceed calmly without any make-believe. —Grove Patterson in the Mobile Register

125 ABSENT VOTER BALLOTS SENT OUT BY COUNTY AUDITOR

County Auditor C. W. Mahlum reports a land-office business in absent voter's ballots this year. Ordinarily, he says, his office sends out from half a dozen to a dozen ballots but this year they have sent out 125, and the end is not yet. This is a good indication of interest for when people are willing to pay 35 cents rather than lose a vote, it shows that they consider it worth something.

It has been suggested that the matter of the importance of the amendments be brought to the attention of new voters. Not in regard to how they should vote, of course, but the importance of not neglecting to vote. Many voters do not realize that neglect to vote on an amendment is equivalent to a vote against it. In considering whether or not an amendment has passed, the entire vote cast at that election is taken into consideration—not just the number of pink ballots voted. Amendments are always on pink ballots and there are just two to be voted upon, at this election. Both are very important and, if passed, will mean a radical departure from our present policy. New voters and old should take the trouble to inform themselves on the subject matter of these amendments before November as there will scarcely be time to give them sufficient consideration in the time allotted to each voter in the booth—not more than ten minutes.

The question has been asked as to the number of ballots to be voted at this election. There will be three. The white ballot will carry the national and state officers, the blue ballot district and county officers, and the pink ballot the amendments. The pink ballot will be small but its importance cannot be measured by its size, so do not forget to vote on the amendments.

FIRST AIR STOWAWAY IN HISTORY

Clarence Terhune, 20-year-old St. Louis lad, who was discovered a stowaway among the mail bags of the Graf Zeppelin a few hours after the start of his voyage to Germany. During the latter part of the two years since his disappearance from home, he has been employed as a caddy at the Rye, N. Y., Country club, and has taken an intense interest in aviation activities. A cable from Germany stated that the entire country was stirred by the news of Terhune's feat in boarding the ship through the mail hatch and that a great welcome was being planned for the plucky youth. It is an old superstition that a stowaway assures safe passage, so Friedrichshafen is wishing the American boy, at present a dishwasher, good luck. This picture was rushed from St. Louis over telephone wires.

Can You Look About?

When you wake up in the morning can you clearly, honestly, without evasion of self-deceit, face the facts in your life? Can you look forward toward what you expect to do without shame or fear or doubt? If there is real contentment in this world it comes from this ability to face all the facts and to proceed calmly without any make-believe.—Grove Patterson in the Mobile Register

125 ABSENT VOTER BALLOTS SENT OUT BY COUNTY AUDITOR

County Auditor C. W. Mahlum reports a land-office business in absent voter's ballots this year. Ordinarily, he says, his office sends out from half a dozen to a dozen ballots but this year they have sent out 125, and the end is not yet. This is a good indication of interest for when people are willing to pay 35 cents rather than lose a vote, it shows that they consider it worth something.

It has been suggested that the matter of the importance of the amendments be brought to the attention of new voters. Not in regard to how they should vote, of course, but the importance of not neglecting to vote. Many voters do not realize that neglect to vote on an amendment is equivalent to a vote against it. In considering whether or not an amendment has passed, the entire vote cast at that election is taken into consideration—not just the number of pink ballots voted. Amendments are always on pink ballots and there are just two to be voted upon, at this election. Both are very important and, if passed, will mean a radical departure from our present policy. New voters and old should take the trouble to inform themselves on the subject matter of these amendments before November as there will scarcely be time to give them sufficient consideration in the time allotted to each voter in the booth—not more than ten minutes.

The question has been asked as to the number of ballots to be voted at this election. There will be three. The white ballot will carry the national and state officers, the blue ballot district and county officers, and the pink ballot the amendments. The pink ballot will be small but its importance cannot be measured by its size, so do not forget to vote on the amendments.

WHAT REPUBLICAN PARTY HAS DONE FOR FARMERS OF TODD COUNTY

THE Long Prairie Leader in graphic shape tells what the Republican party has done for the farmers of Todd county. The same thing can be duplicated in Crow Wing county, in proportion, as we do not produce as much butter and other dairy products as Todd county farmers.

Read the Todd county tribute, Mr. Business Man, Mr. Farmer, Mr. Worker of the City and Mrs. Housewife and other voters and see what Republican aid given the farmer means.

The present tariff bill, voted against by nearly every democrat in congress and by every one of the 22 democrats from Governor Smith's home city of New York, gives a 12c per pound bonus on butter.

What does this mean in dollars and cents to Todd county farmers?

In 1927 there was marketed in Todd county 4,576,387 pounds of butterfat at the creameries. Every pound of this drew the bonus in the shape of a better price for butter.

This tariff is practically 100 per cent effective as it keeps out foreign butter and gives the American market to the American dairyman.

This tariff bonus amounted to more than half a million dollars to Todd county farmers alone in just the one year of 1927. To be exact the amount at 12c per pound amounted to $549,166.44.

That is quite a sum and remember that the bill to give this to Todd county farmers was voted against by every Senator and Representative from Governor Smith's home city of New York whose politics is controlled completely by the organization, Tammany, of which Governor Smith is one of the principal leaders.

In addition the republicans have put a substantial tariff on wool, beef, pork, poultry and eggs and this tariff is constantly at work to give farmers better prices on those products. The tariff on wool, for instance, is 31c per pound. This high tariff keeps out large quantities of foreign wool and is the biggest factor there is operating to give Todd county farmers the splendid wool price they got this fall on their wool clip.

The next time you hear a man say the republican party has done nothing for the farmers of Todd county, ask him about butter and wool and all these other products produced in Todd county.

When you vote November 6, vote for your own pocketbook. Vote for Hoover and Nelson and Knutson, the republican national candidates who stand for the protective tariff.

PHILOSOPHY TAKES TO THE AIR

RADIO'S latest achievement—some folk will say its greatest—is the broadcasting of a college philosopher's morning lecture to his class. The young philosophers in the making just lie abed and take it in repose, as becomes a philosopher, says the Minneapolis Journal.

It had to come. For this is a world of balances and counter-balances, of compensations all the way down the line. There was no power on earth that could compel the human race indefinitely to endure morning exercises. "One and—Tuh and—Three a-n-duh Four," might hold their bond slaves to the rack of the daily dozen for a while, but inevitably there had to spring up an emancipator whose genius would proffer succor from gymnastics, competitive allurements for mind over muscle. Even the reducers in too, too flabby flesh were bound to have their rivals in the reducers of philosophical theorems. The world could not soar unrestrainedly on the physical wave lengths; the mind had to have its chance upon the ether.

Moreover, there was bound to come a time when the spirit that wanted to murder the bugler would compel recognition of the paramount claims of those who would rather remain in bed. The generation that was brought up on them was due to cry "havoc," and let loose the dogs of modern invention upon the reciters of those pestiferous lines about the bird with the yellow bill that Hopped upon the window sill,

Cocked his shining eye and said,
"Ain't you 'shamed, you sleepy-head?"

That was false philosophy, as any lie-abed philosopher will tell you. That was plain hokey, if you will but translate into a modernism the confounding cynicism of the revolver against the established order that doesn't argue, but tells you. Philosophy was due to overcome physiology, and thanks to the radio, it has accomplished that subjugation. We shall wallow, henceforth, instead of wallop, when there is thinking to be done. And in a short while, the mind will be back where it belongs—dominating the merely muscular.

AN EXCELLENT RECORD

IN the first commissioner's district County Commissioner John Dewing is a candidate for re-election at the general election. His record as a public servant and a pioneer citizen can hardly be surpassed.

Thirty-four years ago he took up his residence in that district in what is now Roosevelt township, and was one of the organizers both of that township and the common school district in which his home is located.

Having thus settled in one of the outlying portions of the county remote from the railroad, he soon saw the value of good roads, and his record of eleven years on the board shows him to have always been for the development of a well planned system of maintained roads in this county. In fact he was one of the co-authors of the county white line road systems, in which every township in the county has been directly benefited.

For nineteen years before becoming a county commissioner he was chairman of the town board of supervisors, and always kept the township free from debt, and during the time he has been county commissioner the debt of the county has been so reduced that the county will be free from debt by 1930.

His fairness and common sense in the conduct of the county business has been such that the voters of his district should and undoubtedly will re-elect him.

NEW YORK TAXES ALMOST TRIPLED UNDER SMITH

Tammany Administration Shows Average Increase of 40 Per Cent During Each Term.

HIS REGIME IS COSTLY

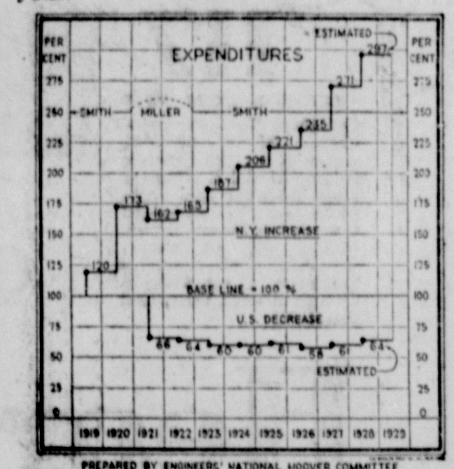

Engineers' Committee Presents Survey Showing Results of Extravagant Government

NEW YORK.—Taxes in New York State have increased an average of 40 per cent during each of the four terms of Alfred E. Smith as Governor, according to figures prepared by the Engineers' National Committee.

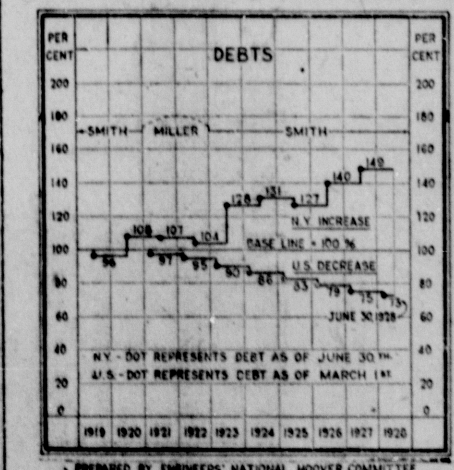

Since Smith was first elected Governor of New York State (in 1919) taxes have almost tripled. During the very first year of his first administration the state's taxes jumped 43 per cent, and during his entire first term the taxes were increased 91 per cent, or to a point almost double that at the opening of his term, two years previous.

This drastic upward trend was halted during the Miller (Republican) term, during the first year of which taxes were actually reduced by 17 per cent, or to a point 59 per cent of the pre-Smith term. The reason why it was possible for Miller to reduce the taxes to near the pre-Smith level was on account of fast expansion expenditures which had been authorized during the Smith administration and which it was imperative to carry out. The taxes during the second year of Miller's term were held practically to the same level as those of the first year.

Immediately upon the second election of Governor Smith the taxes began to climb swiftly, being increased 25 per cent during his second term, 22 per cent during his third term, and 12 per cent during the first year of his fourth term. The average rate of increase during each of his four terms has been 40 per cent.

Since the elimination of actual current war expenditures during the first part of the Harding term, the federal taxes have been reduced by 5.5 per cent, and in no instance have the federal taxes exceeded those of 1921, the first really normal governmental year.

The state expenditures under Smith have also been almost tripled, the only reduction since 1919 being recorded during the Miller term. During the first Smith term the expenditures increased by 73 per cent, and the average increase in expenditures for the four Smith terms has been 35 per cent. Since the first part of the Harding term, when actual war expenditures were eliminated, the federal expenditures have been fairly stationary, but with a downward tendency, the lowest point being reached in 1926.

Notwithstanding this downward tendency in the federal taxes, the national debt of over 25 billion dollars in 1919 has been gradually reduced to around 17 billion dollars, a reduction of about 8 billion dollars or 32 per cent during the last eight years. During the same period the debt of the State of New York under the leadership of Governor Smith has also increased by 40 per cent.

PAY $2,500 FOR 'FALSE ARREST'

London Police Department Uses Own Funds as Balm for Error.

London.—If ever any American police department awarded damages from its own funds to a man who has been arrested and discharged, it not commonly known, but that is what happened here.

Maj. Graham Bell Murray, C. I. E., distinguished officer of the Indian army, who served in Gallipoli and France in the war and was twice mentioned in dispatches for both brains and bravery, has been awarded $2,500 from the funds of the metropolitan police district. He declares that he is entirely dissatisfied and that the loss of dignity and the expense to which he was put should entitle him to at least $25,000. On the face of the returns his claim would appear to be sound, but an American would say that he is a miracle man.

Led to Department Probe.

Major Murray's case is one of the causes celebres which brought about the appointment by the home secretary, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, of the street offenses committee to inquire into the numerous complaints that policemen have been recklessly arresting people without sufficient evidence on charges of insulting women, or of engaging in indecent conduct.

The charges have shaken the police system to its foundation, and have culminated in the famous Hyde Park case, in which Sir Leo Money, for eleven years a member of parliament, and a Miss Savidge were arrested for alleged improprieties by two policemen in Hyde Park, only to be discharged. The case of Sir Leo and Miss Savidge has become a grave question in parliament, has become a political problem, the Socialists going solidly against the police, and several suits being filed by Inspector Collins and the arresting officer against two weekly papers.

Major Murray was arrested last August 24 on the charge of being drunk and of peering, or leering into the faces of two women. J. Thurston, arresting officer, asserted that the woman appeared to be very much annoyed at the time but they did not appear against the major when he was brought before Magistrate Mead at Marlborough street police court the next morning.

Thurston testified that the major was drunk and peering. No other evidence of the peering was brought forth, but Inspector John Clarke, at the Vine street station, and Dr. Ian MacPherson, a police surgeon, testified that the major was drunk. That made it an ordinary case of the police against a prisoner on the much mooted question: When is a man legally drunk? But matters were complicated by the charge that the gallant major had insulted women and the women were not forthcoming.

Charges Rights Denied.

Furthermore, Major Murray charged that he was thrown into a cell and was not informed of his right to telephone to fellow members at the Junior Army and Navy club, which he had left a few minutes before he was arrested, nor was he allowed to call a private physician to examine into the question of whether he was drunk.

As the case involved the integrity of the police, Magistrate Mead postponed the case, but later he fined Major Murray 40 shillings, or about $10, with five guineas costs, or a little more than $25.

Major Murray appealed to the London Quarter Sessions against the police court decision. Sir Robert Wallace heard the appeal. Police Constable Thurston stuck to his story that the major was drunk and peering. Major Murray produced friends from the club who swore he was perfectly sober among them a few minutes prior to the arrest. Before the defense had finished calling witnesses Sir Robert announced he had heard enough. He reversed the police court decision and completely exonerated the major.

The case was carried to the street offenses committee and a subcommittee heard it all over again, with the result that Major Murray was exonerated once more and the award of $2,500 from the metropolitan police district fund was added as further balm.

London.—If ever any American justice department awarded damages from its own funds to a man who has been arrested and discharged, it not commonly known, but that is what happened here.

Maj. Graham Bell Murray, C. I. E., distinguished officer of the Indian army, who served in Gallipoli and France in the war and was twice mentioned in dispatches for both brains and bravery, has been awarded $2,500 from the funds of the metropolitan police district. He declares that he is entirely dissatisfied and that the loss of dignity and the expense to which he was put should entitle him to at least $25,000. On the face of the returns his claim would appear to be sound, but an American would say that he is a miracle man.

Led to Department Probe.

Major Murray's case is one of the causes celebres which brought about the appointment by the home secretary, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, of the street offenses committee to inquire into the numerous complaints that policemen have been recklessly arresting people without sufficient evidence on charges of insulting women, or of engaging in indecent conduct.

The charges have shaken the police system to its foundation, and have culminated in the famous Hyde Park case, in which Sir Leo Money, for eleven years a member of parliament, and a Miss Savidge were arrested for alleged improprieties by two policemen in Hyde Park, only to be discharged. The case of Sir Leo and Miss Savidge has become a grave question in parliament, has become a political problem, the Socialists going solidly against the police, and several suits being filed by Inspector Collins and the arresting officer against two weekly papers.

Major Murray was arrested last August 24 on the charge of being drunk and of peering, or leering into the faces of two women. J. Thurston, arresting officer, asserted that the woman appeared to be very much annoyed at the time but they did not appear against the major when he was brought before Magistrate Mead at Marlborough street police court the next morning.

Thurston testified that the major was drunk and peering. No other evidence of the peering was brought forth, but Inspector John Clarke, at the Vice street station, and Dr. Ian MacPherson, a police surgeon, testified that the major was drunk. That made it an ordinary case of the police against a prisoner on the much mooted question: When is a man legally drunk? But matters were complicated by the charge that the gallant major had insulted women and the women were not forthcoming.

Charges Rights Denied.

Furthermore, Major Murray charged that he was thrown into a cell and was not informed of his right to telephone to fellow members at the Junior Army and Navy club, which he had left a few minutes before he was arrested, nor was he allowed to call a private physician to examine him the question of whether he was drunk.

As the case involved the integrity of the police, Magistrate Mead postponed the case, but later he fined Major Murray 40 shillings, or about $10, with five guineas costs, or a little more than $25.

Major Murray appealed to the London Quarter Sessions against the police court decision. Sir Robert Wallace heard the appeal. Police Constable Thurston stuck to his story that the major was drunk and peering. Major Murray produced friends from the club who swore he was perfectly sober among them a few minutes prior to the arrest. Before the defense had finished calling witnesses Sir Robert announced he had heard enough. He reversed the police court decision and completely exonerated the major.

The case was carried to the street offenses committee and a subcommittee heard it all over again, with the result that Major Murray was exonerated once more and the award of $2,500 from the metropolitan police district fund was added as further balm.

SATURDAY

SPEARS TRIES OUT PHARMER, WESTIN, WESTPHAL AND ARENDE

QUARTET DIDN'T SEEM TO FILL THE BILL, IT IS REPORTED

(By United Press)
Minneapolis, Oct. 31.—(UP)—With Bronko Nagurski, injured fullback, out of the game, Coach Spears is up against it with the Northwestern game coming Saturday. Three or four candidates, including Farmer, Westin, Westphal and Arende, were tried out yesterday but didn't seem to fill the bill.

West Point, N. Y.—Chris Cagle, the Army's star halfback, may not be used against DePauw this week unless the western eleven is stronger than expected. Cagle will be saved for the Notre Dame game a week hence and Piper probably will be used at his place.

Annapolis, Md.—The Navy is paying special attention this week to developing its forward pass attack for the West Virginia Wesleyan game this week. A pass, Gannon to Moret, gave the Middles their second victory of the season over Penn last week.

Princeton, N. J.—All of Princeton's cripples except Graham Jones, halfback, are back in shape and Coach Bill Roper has almost the team's entire strength at his disposal for the first time this season.

Philadelphia — Pennsylvania will start two new ends against Chicago Saturday. They are Joey Schaaf, varsity basketball captain, and Syd Gervin. The coaches were disappointed in the work of Ball and Olexy against the Navy.

Champaign—Coach Zupke hopes between now and the time the whistle blows for the Michigan game to find the necessary punch that will spell victory for the Illini. He put the freshmen through Michigan varsity plans yesterday in preparation for scrimmage with the varsity the rest of the week.

Manhattan, Kas.—Coach N. H. McMillin has abandoned secret practice for his Kansas Aggie team and is requiring his charges to work overtime in preparation for the Missouri game here Nov. 10.

Columbia, Mo.—When Coach Gwynn Henry told his Missouri Tigers what was wrong with their playing against Nebraska, he spoke to a revamped Tiger line-up. Mehrle, Roseheim, Smith and Brown were kept from drill yesterday by injuries.

'Twas Custom in Ur for Queen to Die With King

Cleveland, Ohio.—The queen of an ancient Ur, whose body was dug up recently, was only twenty-seven years old when she was slain so that she could be buried with her husband, according to Dr. T. Wingate Todd of Western Reserve university, an authority on the age of skeletons.

The king himself, Doctor Todd said, was forty-five, when he died. The bodies of the king, the queen and one of the nobles of the court were recovered in excavations in Chaldean.

"The skulls of the queen and the noble of the court had been crushed," said Doctor Todd. "Evidently they had been beaten with some sort of club. It was the custom when the king died for his queen and court to be buried with him.

The scientist made the examination of the skeletons in Europe this summer at the request of Sir Arthur Kent of the college of surgeons of the British museum.

PRINCETON-OHIO, PENNSYLVANIA AND CHICAGO

BIG TEN TEAMS DEMONSTRATED SUPERIORITY OVER EASTERN ELEVEN

LAST YEAR WON 3 OUT OF 5 INTERSECTIONAL GAMES

By GEORGE KIRKSEY (United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Oct. 31.—The first chance this season for a comparison of football as played in the east and by the Big Ten will be afforded on Saturday by the Princeton-Ohio State game at Columbus, and the Pennsylvania-Chicago game at Chicago.

Big Ten eleven demonstrated superiority over eastern eleven last season by winning three out of five intersectional games. Princeton beat Ohio State, 20 to 0, and Harvard defeated Indiana, 26 to 6, for the east's two victories, both games being played in the east.

Purdue invaded Cambridge and won from Harvard, 19 to 0. Chicago defeated Pennsylvania, 13 to 7, at Chicago, and Michigan trounced the Navy, 27 to 12, in the west.

Four games are scheduled between eastern and Big Ten teams this season. Besides the Princeton-Ohio State and Penn-Chicago games, Navy will meet Michigan at Baltimore on Nov. 10 and Dartmouth will play Northwestern at Chicago Nov. 24.

The general impression among football men familiar with eastern and mid-western play is that the western variety is a trifle better.

Outside the Army, New York University and perhaps one or two other teams, the east has no really great football machines this year.

The Big Ten has Iowa, Ohio State, Illinois, Minnesota and Wisconsin apparently better than the east's five best teams, excepting West Point.

The Army might beat any one of the Big Ten teams, but the Army is quite possibly capable of beating any football team in captivity this season.

Despite the fact that Virginia held Princeton to a scoreless tie and Cornell almost did the same thing, the Tigers have the potential strength to develop into one of the east's best teams.

Mike Miles, Trix Bennett and Ed Wittmer will all return to the Princeton backfield against Ohio State this week, giving the Tigers full strength for the first time since the opening game.

Unfortunately, the weakness of Coach Stag's eleven, this season will not permit a true test of Big Ten strength in the Pennsylvania-Chicago clash. Penn is none too strong, but should trim the woefully weak Chicago eleven.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—George "Babe" Ruth and Lou Gehrig, home run twins of the New York Yankees, were called upon to give medical aid last night, but their patient died in the arms of Ruth.

The two were on a train between St. Louis and Omaha when C. A. Pate, 65, also on the train, was stricken with apoplexy. No doctor was aboard and other passengers called on Ruth and Gehrig for aid. Ruth did what he could but the man died in a few minutes and his body was returned here today for burial.

Ruth and Gehrig are scheduled for an exhibition game in Denver today.

Kickin' Up Star Dust

HAVIN' HAD PLENTY OF TROUBLE WITH HIS THROWIN' ARM,

Benny BENGOUGH

YANKEE CATCHER, PROVED ONE OF THE STARS FOR HUGGINS IN NEW YORK'S DECISIVE VICTORY OVER THE ST. LOUIS CARDINALS.

By QUIN HALL.

FOR a guy who has had plenty of trouble with his throwing arm, young Benny Bengough, backstop for the New York Yankees, sure made good with a wallop when he was called upon to do the first-string catching during the recent World's Series.

Benny, a resident of Niagara Falls, is only 28 years old, but there have been times when he couldn't pick up his shoes, let alone flip a ball down across the turf from the home plate to the keystone sack and nip a fast runner who was anxious to fatten up his stolen base percentage.

Bengough bore the brunt of the backstopping for the Yankees during the entire series and the fact that he held the Cardinals to a scarcity of stolen bases, speaks well for his present ability to get them down to second.

While Ruth, Gehrig, Hoyt and Lazzeri dazzled during the Fall classic, it can be stated, without much fear of contradiction, that Bengough was kicking up considerable star dust back of the old platter and his name must be included in the list which made possible those four straight Yankee victories.

Bengough has only played with two clubs during his professional baseball career—Buffalo and the Yankees.

He was attending Niagara University in the Summer of 1917, and was 17 years old when he went with the Buffalo Club. He caught in batting practice and in the bull pen and the job paid $5 a day, collectable following the game each day. Along in September, Patsy Donovan, who was managing the club, signed Benny up to a regular contract calling for $150 a month. When the season ended the club was bankrupt so Benny had to wait for his last two weeks' pay until the following Spring, when Joe Lannin, one of the stockholders, took over the whole works.

During the war years Bengough worked as first-string catcher for Buffalo and was sold to the Yankees in the midst of the 1922 season with orders not to report until the following Spring. Joining the Yanks, Benny served as third-string backstop until along about June, 1925, when Huggins started to make room for some of his youngsters. It was about the time that Bengough went behind the pan that Gehrig started working at the initial corner.

It was in 1926, at St. Petersburg, that Benny found that he could scarcely return a ball to the pitcher and shortly after that his arm took a turn for the worse. Then it began to come back and he was going along in fairly good shape when Uhle broke it with a pitched ball in the fifth game of the series played in Cleveland that September.

Last year he was still getting over his injury and wasn't of much value to the club outside of the value he managed to do in the bull pen but this year he has more than made up to the club for carrying him along and his work during the series with the Cardinals proved that he is a dependable first-string catcher and that he can turn and get under foul balls as rapidly as any backstop in baseball.

The Yankee pitchers all like to work with Benny back of the plate and he has a world of pep during a game. He has the faculty of showmanship, and he never gulps under a foul or lopes over to back up Gehrig at first without beating a tattoo on his big mitten.

He isn't taking any chances on his arm going back on him again, and plans to visit a specialist at Philadelphia during the off season. And in the meantime he's quite a hero in the towns where he is best known—Buffalo and New York.

Two Custom in Ur for Queen to Die With King

Cleveland, Ohio.—The queen of an ancient Ur, whose body was dug up recently, was only twenty-seven years old when she was slain so that she could be buried with her husband, according to Dr. T. Wingate Todd of Western Reserve university, an authority on the age of skeletons.

The king himself, Doctor Todd said, was forty-five, when he died. The bodies of the king, the queen and one of the nobles of the court were recovered in excavations in Chaldea.

"The skulls of the queen and the noble of the court had been crushed," said Doctor Todd. "Evidently they had been beaten with some sort of club. It was the custom when the king died for his queen and court to be buried with him.

The scientist made the examination of the skeletons in Europe this summer at the request of Sir Arthur Kent of the college of surgeons of the British museum.

PRINCETON-OHIO, PENNSYLVANIA AND CHICAGO

BIG TEN TEAMS DEMONSTRATED SUPERIORITY OVER EASTERN ELEVEN

LAST YEAR WON 3 OUT OF 5 INTERSECTIONAL GAMES

By GEORGE KIRKSEY (United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Oct. 31.—The first chance this season for a comparison of football as played in the east and by the Big Ten will be afforded on Saturday by the Princeton-Ohio State game at Columbus, and the Pennsylvania-Chicago game at Chicago. Big Ten eleven demonstrated superiority over eastern eleven last season by winning three out of five intersectional games. Princeton beat Ohio State, 20 to 0, and Harvard defeated Indiana, 26 to 6, for the east's two victories, both games being played in the east.

Purdue invaded Cambridge and won from Harvard, 19 to 0. Chicago defeated Pennsylvania, 13 to 7, at Chicago, and Michigan trounced the Navy, 27 to 12, in the west.

Four games are scheduled between eastern and Big Ten teams this season. Besides the Princeton-Ohio State and Penn-Chicago games, Navy will meet Michigan at Baltimore on Nov. 10 and Dartmouth will play Northwestern at Chicago Nov. 24.

The general impression among football men familiar with eastern and mid-western play is that the western variety is a trifle better.

Outside the Army, New York University and perhaps one or two other teams, the east has no really great football machines this year.

The Big Ten has Iowa, Ohio State, Illinois, Minnesota and Wisconsin apparently better than the east's five best teams, excepting West Point.

The Army might beat any one of the Big Ten teams, but the Army is quite possibly capable of beating any football team in captivity this season.

Despite the fact that Virginia held Princeton to a scoreless tie and Cornell almost did the same thing, the Tigers have the potential strength to develop into one of the east's best teams.

Mike Miles, Trix Bennett and Ed Wittmer will all return to the Princeton backfield against Ohio State this week, giving the Tigers full strength for the first time since the opening game.

Unfortunately, the weakness of Coach Stagg's eleven, this season will not permit a true test of Big Ten strength in the Pennsylvania-Chicago clash. Penn is none too strong, but should trim the woefully weak Chicago eleven.

JACKIE FIELDS SCORES WIN OVER SERGT. BAKER

FIELDS KNOCKS OUT OPPONENT IN SECOND ROUND OF BOUT

BATTLE HAD BEEN SCHEDULED FOR TEN ROUNDS AT WRIGLEY FIELD

Los Angeles, Oct. 31.—(UP)—Jackie Fields, young Los Angeles fighter, who came up from the amateur ranks along with Fidel La Barba, has added a victory over Sergeant Sammy Baker of New York to his already imposing claims for recognition in the welterweight division.

In the last outdoor boxing show of the season here, Fields knocked out Baker last night in the second round of a Wrigley Field bout that had been scheduled for ten rounds.

Fields weighed 145½ pounds; Baker 146½.

RUTH AND GEHRIG GIVE FIRST AID-BUT PATIENT EXPIRES

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 31.—(UP)—George "Babe" Ruth and Lou Gehrig, home run twins of the New York Yankees, were called upon to give medical aid last night, but their patient died in the arms of Ruth.

The two were on a train between St. Louis and Omaha when C. A. Pate, 65, also on the train, was stricken with apoplexy. No doctor was aboard and other passengers called on Ruth and Gehrig for aid. Ruth did what he could but the man died in a few minutes and his body was returned here today for burial.

Kickin' Up Star Dust

HAVIN' HAD PLENTY OF TROUBLE WITH HIS THROWIN' ARM, Benny BENGOUGH YANKER CATCHER, PROVED ONE OF TH' STARS FOR HUGGINS IN NEW YORK'S DECISIVE VICTORY OVER TH' ST. LOUIS CARDINALS.

By QUIN HALL

FOR a guy who has had plenty of trouble with his throwing arm, young Benny Bengough, backstop for the New York Yankees, sure made good with a wallop when he was called upon to do the first-string catching during the recent World's Series.

Benny, a resident of Niagara Falls, is only 28 years old, but there have been times when he couldn't pick up his shoes, let alone flip a ball down across the turf from the home plate to the keystone sack and nip a fast runner who was anxious to fatten up his stolen base percentage.

Bengough bore the brunt of the backstopping for the Yankees during the entire series and the fact that he held the Cardinals to a scarcity of stolen bases, speaks well for his present ability to get them down to second.

While Ruth, Gehrig, Hoyt and Lazzeri dazzled during the Fall classic, it can be stated, without much fear of contradiction, that Bengough was kicking up considerable star dust back of the old platter and his name must be included in the list which made possible those four straight Yankee victories.

Bengough has only played with two clubs during his professional baseball career—Buffalo and the Yankees.

He was attending Niagara University in the Summer of 1917, and was 17 years old when he went with the Buffalo Club. He caught in batting practice and in the bull pen and the job paid $5 a day, collectable following the game each day. Along in September, Patsy Donovan, who was managing the club, signed Benny up to a regular contract calling for $150 a month.

When the season ended the club was bankrupt so Benny had to wait for his last two weeks' pay until the following Spring, when Joe Lannin, one of the stockholders, took over the whole works.

During the war years Bengough worked as first-string catcher for Buffalo and was sold to the Yankees in the midst of the 1922 season with orders not to report until the following Spring. Joining the Yanks, Benny served as third-string backstop until about June, 1925, when Huggins started to make room for some of his youngsters. It was about the time that Bengough went behind the pan that Gehrig started working at the initial corner.

It was in 1926, at St. Petersburg, that Benny found that he could scarcely return a ball to the pitcher and shortly after that his arm took a turn for the worse. Then it began to come back and he was going along in fairly good shape when Uhle broke it with a pitched ball in the fifth game of the series played in Cleveland that September.

Last year he was still getting over his injury and wasn't of much value to the club outside of the work he managed to do in the bull pen but this year he has more than made up to the club for carrying him along and his work during the series with the Cardinals proved that he is a dependable first-string catcher and that he can turn and get under foul balls as rapidly as any backstop in baseball.

The Yankee pitchers all like to work with Benny back of the plate and he has a world of pep during a game. He has the faculty of showmanship, and he never gallops under a foul or lopes over to back up Gehrig at first without beating a tattoo on his big mitten.

He isn't taking any chances on his arm going back on him again, and plans to visit a specialist at Philadelphia during the off season. And in the meantime he's quite a hero in the towns where he is best known—Buffalo and New York.

GEO. B. SHAW INTERVIEWED ON DISARMAMENT

WINDOWS OF BRITISH WAR DEPARTMENT VISIBLE FROM HIS APARTMENTS

SHAW WANTED TO BE ASKED VERY SERIOUS QUESTIONS

This is another in a series of conversations with men famous in British public life and letters, obtained by Henry T. Russell, of the United Press London bureau.

By HENRY T. RUSSELL
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1928, in all Countries by United Press, all rights reserved)

London, Oct. 31.—"If they disarm they can still fight with their table knives and rabbit guns, or their teeth and claws," said a tall, blue-eyed, white-haired old man with a Shavian beard in reply to the question: Do you think that the nations of the world will ever agree to disarm?

It was during a conversation between George Bernard Shaw, popularly known as "G. B. S.," and the United Press correspondent to whom he had granted an exclusive interview. It took place at the great socialist satirist's apartment in Whitehall Court, a superb block of buildings, from the windows of which the British war office is visible, scarcely one hundred feet distant.

"Why am I never interviewed on serious questions?" Shaw had asked in a witty statement recently published.

"And when these were promised him, the great writer replied: 'All right then, put your questions and I will do my best to answer them.'"

The Shavian challenge was accepted with the following result: "Do you believe," he was asked, "that pacts like the Kellogg pact are of any use in the prevention of future wars?"

"Are you satisfied that the United States is anxious to foster peace and good will among nations? Do you believe that her efforts, past and present, will have any serious effect upon the outlook of peace?"

"The United States," Shaw replied, "proved in 1917 that it was more frankly bellicose than any of the European combatants, it sent girls to prison for eighteen years for deprecating war, and arrested men for quoting the constitution. All Christian nations preach peace and good will—making quite a fuss about it on the 25th of December—until the first shot is fired and then—!"

In contrast to America's peace efforts, Shaw was asked for his opinion on the Soviet's proposal for complete world disarmament. He answered:

"It called our peace bluff very effectively. When we turned it down under cover of refusing to speak to the wicked Russians we did not foresee that Mr. Kellogg would pick it up again, and that we could not turn him down in view of all the money we owe his country."

Next came the question, "Do you think that anti-war plays and serious anti-war literature can have any beneficial effect upon the future peace prospects of the world?" The reply came swiftly, briefly:

"That depends on whether they are good plays or bad ones."

Three other questions also received brief replies:

Question: "Do you think that the nations of the world will ever disarm?"

Reply: "If they disarm they can still fight with their table knives and rabbit guns, or their teeth and claws."

Question: "Is disarmament essential to the future peace of the world?"

Reply: "Disarmament is a very superficial remedy for war."

Question: "Is public opinion sufficiently strong to prevent future wars? Do you think that if there were another world war in prospect, the influence of modern womanhood could stop it?"

Reply: "Yes, if it is sufficiently pacifist and plucky. There is no evidence that women are less warlike than men."

Then Shaw was asked what the last war taught public opinion.

"It has," he said, "taught us what savages we are underneath our civilian garments. We are living in a world which has found itself out, and yet does not know in which direction to flee from the wrath to come."

The Shavian reference to "savages" encouraged the correspondent to ask: "Could the last war have been prevented if socialist or labor governments had been in power in the various countries, or a majority of the countries concerned at the time?" The reply was emphatic:

"Yes, of course. At worst Germany and Austria would have had a square fight with Russia, leaving her western frontiers undefended against a friendly France, England and America. Even as it was, if the Kaiser had been properly brought up as a socialist he would have known that he could have done this with perfect safety, as none of his western enemies could possibly have made an unprovoked attack on him whilst he was fighting to defend himself against an attack by Russia."

The next questions Shaw was asked follow: "To what extent do you think socialism will influence the future peace of the world? Has the movement progressed to such an extent that it might be expected to prevent another outbreak of the last war's magnitude? Is it strong enough to prevent any future wars of importance?"

The reply was: "Socialism is not pacifism. It makes for peace inasmuch as every socialist knows that the killing of a German soldier is as great a loss to France as to Germany, and conversely. In short, the slaughter of men who are not criminals is a loss to the world, and the nations have a common interest in the world."

But capitalism, by throwing men into competition instead of co-operation, and allowing the world to be privately appropriated, makes for war, not between nations in search of additional 'places in the sun' to exploit, but for war on socialism as such. We have widely circulated English newspapers shrieking daily for war with Russia because the Russians have adopted socialism as their constitutional principle. And as socialism will fight for its life, and, if successful, possibly for the suppression of capitalism as such, we must, as M. Briand hinted at Geneva, be prepared for war to arise out of socialism just as the 'wars of religion' arose out of the Reformation. Pacifists must make a frontal attack on war, and not trust to free trade or socialism or any other economic or political development to do their work for them."

Fourteen typical Shavian words disposed of the reply to the following:

"If Ramsay MacDonald's government had remained in power to this day, would the Washington disarmament conference have succeeded? Would the Franco-British naval pact negotiations have been opened? Would the outlook for world peace be any better than it is today? If so, why and how?"

Said "G. B. S.": "If its and ans were pots and pans there'd be no need of tinkers."

"What," was the next question, "is the present outlook for peace? What dangers to peace do you visualize at the present time? As Mussolini and fascism, Primo De Rivera and the Spanish dictatorship and possible so-called 'Balkan flares' included?" Shaw's reply was: "Italy is doubling her taxes on bachelors and offering prodigious rewards to large families with the avowed purpose of working up her man power (the reality of armament) so as to be able to hold her own in 1938. This is a fact quite independent of dictatorship. In the face of it, and of cognate facts elsewhere, it seems idle to discuss the outlook for peace. The outlook is still far war."

Picture a tall figure somewhat reminiscent of the cartoonist's Uncle Sam but with a long white beard like a Frenchman's. A pair of small, penetrating but kindly eyes as blue as a fair-haired girl's, fix you when the bearded figure speaks. The voice is softer than his writings would make it appear likely. The accent is like a Bostonian's with the addition of a very faint trace of Irish brogue. The tone is convincing.

If you can visualize this man comfortably seated in an armchair at his desk, dressed in a cosy brown pajama suit and addressing the visitor so masterfully that it makes him feel very small, then you have a fair idea of what G. B. S. is like.

SENATOR SCHALL TO SEEK RE-ELECTION IN 1930, HE STATES

Brooklyn, Minn., Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Senator Thomas D. Schall, republican of Minnesota, declared in a campaign address here last night that he would seek re-election in 1930.

Schall, stumping the state in the interest of Herbert Hoover, said he understood his opponent in the next senatorial race would be Governor Theodore Christianson.

The blind senator explained that while at the time of the nominations he did not favor Hoover he now believed that through the republican candidate the country was best assured continuation of prosperity.

ping southeast, and entered the Bay of Biscay about the middle of it, near the 47th parallel.

Irregular reports from ships and wireless stations indicated the Graf Zeppelin was making her way straight across the Bay of Biscay for just seven hours after she was sighted by the S. S. Boulderpool entering the Bay of Biscay, the Zeppelin sent out signals indicating she was 80 miles off the French coast near St. Nazaire.

Her course from there was not indicated. She could go north by way of Berlin or south by Borden Lyons to Friedrichshafen. Unless she went directly across France, there appeared little chance that she would reach Friedrichshafen before daylight on Thursday.

The Graf's trip westward from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst took more than 111 hours. The best time eastward was 75 hours made by the British R-34 in 1919 from New York to Scotland. Her distance was 1,000 miles less than that being covered by the Graf Zeppelin. The R-34 took 105 hours to make the west-bound trip, a distance of 3,270 miles. The Los Angeles made the west-bound trip in 1924 in 81 hours 17 minutes. She flew 4,010 miles.

Two Self-confessed 'First Class Burglars' Taken at Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Two self-confessed "first class burglars" were under arrest here today while police investigated their incredible stories of petty crimes in southern Minnesota.

Kenneth Dodge, 22, of Milbank, S. D., and Lee Snyder, 21, of no address, were so quick to make confessions and so insistent that they be considered "big-time burglars" that police could hardly believe their stories true until the youths uncovered part of their loot.

Dodge informed police with pride that it was he and Snyder who robbed the Zamboni and Son store, Owatonna, on Saturday night of a number of guns, looted another store in Sleepy Eye, and stole an automobile.

AS A TEST OF LOVE GIRL BURNS SELF IN FURNACE

29 YEAR OLD GIRL INFATUATED
WITH 52 YEAR OLD NIGHT
POLICEMAN

LATTER SAID: "IF SHE HAD A
CRUSH ON ME, I DIDN'T KNOW IT"

By JACK HEIRTZ
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Lake Forest, Ill., Oct. 31.—As a test of her love for a married man, father of five children, Miss Elfrida Knaak, 29-year-old Sunday school teacher, burned herself in the furnace of the Lake Bluff police station, she said in the hospital here today.

Miss Knaak is believed to be dying as a result of the burns. Should she live she would be a hopeless cripple.

"To prove my love for him," was the reason Miss Knaak gave for the torture to which she had subjected herself.

The man she says was her sweetheart is Charles W. Hitchcock, 52, night policeman at Lake Bluff. He is the father of five children and has been married about 18 years.

"Poor girl, if she had a crush on me, I didn't know it," Hitchcock said.

Miss Knaak was found in the furnace room of the Lake Bluff police station, her arms and legs burned almost to the bone.

She was crumpled up at the base of the furnace, naked, and was not able to talk.

She was removed to a Lake Forest hospital. During the night she regained consciousness and mumbled several unintelligible phrases.

It was not until early today that the story was drawn from her. "I did it myself for faith, for love," she said when asked who had tortured her.

"For the past week I have heard a voice saying 'have faith, have faith. When he did not come to see me Monday night I again heard the voice. To prove my faith I thought of fire."

"I removed my clothing. I burned them and them myself."

"I survived and I proved my faith and I'll live. There was no suicide in it."

Then, with loss of consciousness,

her amazing tale of love came to an end.

Both States Attorney Smith and Dr. James Rissinger, her physician, were loath to believe Miss Knaak's story.

Dr. Rissinger pointed out that to believe the story one must believe that she placed one foot in the furnace, held it there in the flames for some time, removed it and then placed the other one in and carried out the same process with her arms.

"It does not seem possible that anyone, even in a trance, could have stood it. Muscular reaction would have made her draw back in spite of herself," Dr. Rissinger said.

Miss Knaak is said to have known Hitchcock for four years. Friends said that in the past few weeks she came to believe that she "knew him spiritually through her knowledge of advanced psychology."

FIVE OF CREW DROWN WHEN SHIPS COLLIDE

London, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—A wireless message received at the Lands End station said five men of the crew of the steamship Horn, of Riga, were drowned when the vessel collided with the British steamer Mansepool.

The collision occurred off Lizard Head, the report said, and the Mansepool saved ten men from the Horn as the vessel sank.

THE L.C.F. NOT THE H.C.L.

We have a theory as to the origin of most of the family arguments at breakfast. It isn't the "H.C.L." but, to be brutally frank, the "L.C.F." "H.C.L." as everyone knows is just plain Old High Cost of Living. "L.C.F." is just as well known, but until recently hasn't been given credit for all the mischief he's been doing for a long row of years—since away back before the Civil War. "L.C.F.'s" plain English name is, "Lack of Coffee Favor."... "L.C.F." however, has had a good reason for existence, because up to now the ordinary method of roasting coffee could not prevent the loss by evaporation of a considerable percentage of the mellow richness placed by Nature in each bean of green coffee and essential to the creation of true coffee flavor.... Nash's Hermetic Process by a new method of Toasting, not roasting, checks this loss of flavor, and makes possible an actual economy in the amount needed per cup. You will find that Nash's Delicious Coffee will banish "L.C.F." from your home and help greatly in the daily battle with old "H.C.L."

But capitalism, by throwing men into competition instead of co-operation, and allowing the world to be privately appropriated, makes for war, not between nations in search of additional 'places in the sun' to exploit, but for war on socialism as such. We have widely circulated English newspapers shrieking daily for war with Russia because the Russians have adopted socialism as their constitutional principle. And as socialism will fight for its life, and, if successful, possibly for the suppression of capitalism as such, we must, as M. Briand hinted at Geneva, be prepared for war to arise out of socialism just as the 'wars of religion' arose out of the Reformation. Pacifists must make a frontal attack on war, and not trust to free trade or socialism or any other economic or political development to do their work for them."

Fourteen typical Shavian words disposed of the reply to the following:

"If Ramsay MacDonald's government had remained in power to this day, would the Washington disarmament conference have succeeded? Would the Franco-British naval pact negotiations have been opened? Would the outlook for world peace be any better than it is today? If so, why and how?"

Said "G. B. S.": "If ifs and ans were pots and pans there'd be no need of tinkers."

"What," was the next question, "is the present outlook for peace? What dangers to peace do you visualize at the present time? As Mussolini and fascism, Primo De Rivera and the Spanish dictatorship and possible so-called 'Balkan flareups' included?"

Shaw's reply was: "Italy is doubling her taxes on bachelors and offering prodigious rewards to large families with the avowed purpose of working up her man power (the reality of armament) so as to be able to hold her own in 1938. This is a fact quite independent of dictatorship. In the face of it, and of cognate facts elsewhere, it seems idle to discuss the outlook for peace. The outlook is still far war."

Picture a tall figure somewhat reminiscent of the cartoonist's Uncle Sam but with a long white beard like a Frenchman's. A pair of small, penetrating but kindly eyes as blue as a fair-haired girl's, fix you when the bearded figure speaks. The voice is softer than his writings would make it appear likely. The accent is like a Bostonian's with the addition of a very faint trace of Irish brogue. The tone is convincing.

If you can visualize this man comfortably seated in an armchair at his desk, dressed in a cosy brown pajama suit and addressing the visitor so masterfully that it makes him feel very small, then you have a fair idea of what G. B. S. is like.

SENATOR SCHALL TO SEEK RE-ELECTION IN 1930, HE STATES

Brooklyn, Minn., Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Senator Thomas D. Schall, republican of Minnesota, declared in a campaign address here last night that he would seek re-election in 1930.

Senator Schall, stumping the state in the interest of Herbert Hoover, said he understood his opponent in the next senatorial race would be Governor Theodore Christianson.

The blind senator explained that while at the time of the nominations he did not favor Hoover he now believed that through the republican candidate the country was best assured continuation of prosperity.

Zeppelin Off on Return Flight

This remarkable night photo shows the huge air liner, the Graf Zeppelin, nosing into the wind above the Navy's Lakehurst, N. J., flying field, on the take-off for Germany. The Levia-

ping southeast, and entered the Bay of Biscay about the middle of it, near the 47th parallel.

Irregular reports from ships and wireless stations indicated the Graf Zeppelin was making her way straight across the Bay of Biscay for just seven hours after she was sighted by the S. S. Boulderpool entering the Bay of Biscay, the Zeppelin sent out signals indicating she was 80 miles off the French coast near St. Nazaire.

Her course from there was not indicated. She could go north by way of Berlin or south by Bordand Lyons to Friedrichshafen. Unless she went directly across France, there appeared little chance that she would reach Friedrichshafen before daylight on Thursday.

The Graf's trip westward from Friedrichshafen to Lakehurst took more than 111 hours. The best time eastward was 75 hours made by the British R-34 in 1919 from New York to Scotland. Her distance was 1,000 miles less than that being covered by the Graf Zeppelin. The R-34 took 108 hours to make the west-bound trip, a distance of 3,270 miles.

The Los Angeles made the west-bound trip in 1924 in 81 hours 17 minutes. She flew 4,010 miles.

Two Self-confessed 'First Class Burglars' Taken at Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—Two self-confessed "first class burglars" were under arrest here today while police investigated their incredible stories of petty crimes in southern Minnesota.

Kenneth Dodge, 22, of Milbank, S. D., and Lee Snyder, 21, of no address, were so quick to make confessions and so insistent that they be considered "big-time burglars" that police could hardly believe their stories true until the youths uncovered part of their loot.

Dodge informed police with pride that it was he and Snyder who robbed the Zamboni and Son store, Owatonna, on Saturday night of a number of guns, looted another store in Sleepy Eye, and stole an automobile.

AS A TEST OF LOVE GIRL BURNS SELF IN FURNACE

29 YEAR OLD GIRL INFATUATED
WITH 52 YEAR OLD NIGHT
POLICEMAN

LATTER SAID: "IF SHE HAD A
CRUSH ON ME, I DIDN'T KNOW IT"

By JACK HEIRTZ
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Lake Forest, Ill., Oct. 31.—As a test of her love for a married man, father of five children, Miss Elfrieda Knaak, 29-year-old Sunday school teacher, burned herself in the furnace of the Lake Bluff police station, she said in the hospital here today.

Miss Knaak is believed to be dying as a result of the burns. Should she live she would be a hopeless cripple.

"To prove my love for him," was the reason Miss Knaak gave for the torture to which she had subjected herself.

The man she says was her sweetheart is Charles W. Hitchcock, 52, night policeman at Lake Bluff. He is the father of five children and has been married about 18 years.

"Poor girl, if she had a crush on me, I didn't know it," Hitchcock said.

Miss Knaak was found in the furnace room of the Lake Bluff police station, her arms and legs burned almost to the bone.

She was crumpled up at the base of the furnace, naked, and was not able to talk.

She was removed to a Lake Forest hospital. During the night she regained consciousness and mumbled several unintelligible phrases.

It was not until early today that the story was drawn from her.

"I did it myself for faith, for love," she said when asked who had tortured her.

"For the past week I have heard a voice saying 'have faith, have faith. When he did not come to see me Monday night I again heard the voice. To prove my faith I thought of fire."

"I removed my clothing. I burned them and myself."

"I survived and I proved my faith and I'll live. There was no suicide in it."

"Then, with loss of consciousness,

her amazing tale of love came to an end.

Both States Attorney Smith and Dr. James Rissinger, her physician, were loath to believe Miss Knaak's story.

Dr. Rissinger pointed out that to believe the story one must believe that she placed one foot in the furnace, held it there in the flames for some time, removed it and then placed the other one in and carried out the same process with her arms.

"It does not seem possible that anyone, even in a trance, could have stood it. Muscular reaction would have made her draw back in spite of herself," Dr. Rissinger said.

Miss Knaak is said to have known Hitchcock for four years. Friends said that in the past few weeks she came to believe that she "knew him spiritually through her knowledge of advanced psychology."

FIVE OF CREW DROWN WHEN SHIPS COLLIDE

London, Oct. 31.—(U.P.)—A wireless message received at the Lands End station said five men of the crew of the steamship Horn, of Riga, were drowned when the vessel collided with the British steamer Mansepool.

The collision occurred off Lizard Head, the report said, and the Mansepool saved ten men from the Horn as the vessel sank.

THE L.C.F. NOT THE H.C.L.

We have a theory as to the origin of most of the family arguments at breakfast. It isn't the "H.C.L." but, to be brutally frank, the "L.C.F." "H.C.L." as everyone knows is just plain Old High Cost of Living. "L.C.F." is just as well known, but until recently hasn't been given credit for all the mischief he's been doing for a long row of years—since away back before the Civil War. "L.C.F.'s" plain English name is, "Lack of Coffee Favor."... "L.C.F." however, has had a good reason for existence, because up to now the ordinary method of roasting coffee could not prevent the loss by evaporation of a considerable percentage of the mellow richness placed by Nature in each bean of green coffee and essential to the creation of true coffee flavor.... Nash's Hermetic Process by a new method of Toasting, not roasting, checks this loss of flavor, and makes possible an actual economy in the amount needed per cup. You will find that Nash's Delicious Coffee will banish "L.C.F." from your home and help greatly in the daily battle with old "H.C.L."

EVERYTHING TO BE FREE

Luncheon at Noon Opens Activities; Goodwill Dance in Evening at Finnish Hall

Saturday will be "young voters day" in Brainerd and will lead all activities prior to election day, November 6, with every young voter in the city irrespective of party affiliations participating in a lively program planned at a meeting last evening of republican young voters at the home of Mrs. Mons Mahlum, North Bluff avenue.

Highlights of the day will include:

Noon luncheon at the republican headquarters, South Sixth street, with a general goodwill get together of all young people of voting age, short snappy speeches, singing, Everything free.

Dance in Finnish Hall, Southeast Brainerd in evening to which everyone of voting age, particularly young people are cordially invited. Order of program includes dancing, inviting music, friendly atmosphere, entertainment between dances, with community goodwill predominating. And again everything will be free.

It will be something new in the way of gathering all young people of voting age together for two happy occasions. Everyone attending either of the functions will receive a warm reception.

Miss Ruth Louise Beise was named in charge of arrangements for the luncheon Saturday noon. She will be assisted by Miss Elizabeth Johnston, and Mrs. Warren Kasch. B. Perry Newton will lead the singing. Arrangements are being made to have Walter F. Wieland, assistant attorney general for the state of Minnesota and Mrs. Freeman Gordon of Minneapolis deliver short talks. The luncheon program will be so timed as to permit all young voters to attend during the noon hour and return to work in time for the afternoon. Workers from the Northern Pacific shops and other Brainerd industries are requested to attend and to come directly from work.

Arrangements are to be completed today for the evening dance in the Finnish Hall. Attorney William J. Swanson was named in charge to be assisted by B. Perry Newton, Dr. N. W. Stewart, Archer Crandall, Ralph Cole, and Clarence Dahlen. Hundreds will attend the dance and enjoy themselves.

Plans were discussed last evening for a torchlight parade to herald the dance. These are to be further discussed at a meeting before Saturday.

PRaises AUXILIARY BAND

"Legionnaire" Tells of Minnesota Advertisers at National Convention

The American Legionnaire, official publication of the Minnesota Departments of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary in its issue of October 17 devotes considerable space to activities of the Minnesota delegations in attendance at the national convention at San Antonio.

Concerning the Brainerd Legion Auxiliary band in attendance, the Legionnaire states:

"The convention high light was the parade, in which the honor of Minnesota was upheld by four, fine uniformed bodies in addition to the individual marchers. Heading the Minnesota section was the William T. McCoy Legion drum corps of Rochester which chartered a special car for the trip and constituted the only Minnesota Legion musical organization at San Antonio.

"But Minnesota had other able advertisers whose presence proves the value of a live Legion Auxiliary. The North Star State was the only one having three Legion Auxiliary musical bodies, the Brainerd Legion Auxiliary band, the Hibbing Legion Auxiliary drum corps, the Minneapolis Auxiliary Glee club. They did themselves proud, not only in the parade but during the trip and through the convention.

"The Brainerd Legion Auxiliary band made a hit when at the Auxiliary convention they played the New Hampshire state song in honor of the national president."

In another column under the heading "Gopherette Sidelights From National Convention," the Legionnaire says:

"The Brainerd Auxiliary band, which marched every step of the long parade, made a decided hit when it marched through the convention hall and played 'Hail to Old New Hampshire.' New Hampshire is the home state of Mrs. Robert Walbridge, outgoing national president. She was much pleased with the tribute."

TRUCK, CAR MEET ON 13TH STREET

Truck Overturns in Ditch as Car Jumps Ditch and Goes Over Embankment

NO SERIOUS INJURIES

Peter Wolvert Driver of Car Claims Lights of Approaching Truck Blinded Him

A truck and a car came together on 13th street last evening, the truck overturning in the ditch and the car hurdling the ditch and coming to a stop in a farmers field after climbing a four foot bank.

No serious injuries resulted from the crash. The truck, a Whippet was driven by Louis Wiedl and the car a Buick touring was driven by Peter Wolvert.

Wiedl was driving to Brainerd and Wolvert was going south. Wolvert claims the lights of the approaching truck blinded him. The truck received a damaged fender, and one of the wheels was torn off. The Wolvert car was also damaged.

Mr. Wiedl received scratches while Mrs. Wiedl had her back strained. She is at present under physician's care.

POLICE HOLD TWO DOGS

Two Playful Spaniels to be Shot Unless Immediately Claimed by Owners

Two spaniel dogs were having the time of their young lives today in the basement of the city hall, jumping high in the air, playfully biting each other, rolling over and squirming with delight when anyone visited them.

But unless claimed within a few days police will be forced to shoot them. The one is a golden cocker spaniel with white spots on its head and the other is a brown water spaniel. The two were picked up for not having tags.

DAGGETT BROOK

Miss Hannah Linn was unable to teach school Friday because of illness. We hope she is soon better.

Mrs. Clarence Englehart and children visited at the James home last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Earl Miller and children spent a few days this week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Ringering.

Miss Mildred Vanderwerker spent the week end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Vanderwerker. Mildred is attending high school in Brainerd.

Miss Helen Moore and Miss Mary Chase, who have been holding Bible studies at the District No. 18 school house, concluded their studies Saturday night, and left Sunday morning for Bemidji and Hibbing.

Rev. N. P. Olmsted of Brainerd spoke at the school house last Sunday night. He is to speak here again in two weeks from last Sunday night and we hope there will be a larger crowd than there was at this last meeting.

Miss Hannah Linn and the pupils of District No. 18 are giving a program on next Saturday night. We are sure that it will be good.

IDEAL

Mr. and Mrs. Iver Benson were entertained at dinner at the Mrs. Moe home Tuesday.

Clarence Allen returned home last week from a visit with friends and relatives in the southern part of the state. His sister, Mrs. Otto Stiebler and also his father returned with him for a visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Lear and also their daughter and son-in-law of Montevideo have moved to their home on the old Allen farm near the Ideal town hall which they purchased recently.

F. E. Plum is digging a basement under the house on the E. W. Johnson farm.

The measles have made their call in this neighborhood. The children of T. A. Clarquist, John Hanson, Anton Monson, Roy and Alice Houge have had them. But the T. A. Clarquist and John Hanson children now have the whooping cough which seemed to have also followed the measles.

Anton Pederson called at Ole Johnson home Sunday evening.

Torrie Barkka and son, Thomas, of Litchfield and T. A. Brown of Pequot were dinner guests at R. E. Houge's Sunday. They enjoyed an old acquaintance visit as Mr. Barkka worked for Mr. Houge during the time they lived in Iowa.

Mr. and Mrs. John Knutson are staying at the Island View lodge resort as caretakers for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wallentine and family were callers at Jack Lamont's Sunday.

Ruth Houge and Orville Oas visited at the N. Nelson home at Brainerd Sunday afternoon.

YOUTH COMMITTED TO RED WING

Minneapolis Boy Who Lead Huckleberry Finn Life Sent to School

BROKE INTO COTTAGE

Testimony Showed That Youth Lived in Woods, Eating Whenever Possible

A 15 year old Minneapolis boy who lived a Huckleberry Finn existence was committed to the school for boys at Red Wing Monday from juvenile court here after testimony was received which showed the youth guilty of breaking into a summer cottage at Mille Lacs Lake recently and stealing property.

His parents divorced, his father disappearing and his mother remarrying, the boy went to make his home with a grandmother in Minneapolis. He craved excitement in new fields with the result that he skipped school on several occasions, disappearing from his home. During these trips he pictured himself a knight of the roads, seeking adventure. He would sleep in the woods and eat where he could.

The wanderlust seized him this fall so he started northwest from Minneapolis. He joined three young men at Mille Lacs Lake and the party lived by securing food wherever possible. At one time three chickens were stolen from a farmyard and a feast was had in the woods, the testimony showed. The four slept in barns until complaints were made to the county sheriff's department. Before arrests were possible, two of the boys left for North Dakota and the other two were arrested. One of the boys is now in jail awaiting trial in district court for breaking into a cottage.

A representative of the Children's Protective Society of Minneapolis came to Brainerd while the youth was held here on behalf of the boy but on hearing the evidence waived the right to return the youth to Minneapolis.

Every purchaser of a new Ford is entitled to Free Inspection Service for the first 1500 miles

THE modern automobile is a finely built piece of machinery and it will stand a lot of abuse. Considering the work it does, it gives surprisingly little trouble. But there isn't a car made that will not run better and longer if given proper care.

The first few hundred miles are especially important because that is when the mechanism of your car is being broken in. Proper attention during this period will lengthen its life and prevent unnecessary trouble later on.

We are particularly interested in this matter because we believe it is our duty not only to make a good automobile, but to help the owner get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

With this in view, the entire Ford dealer organization has been specially trained and equipped to service the new Model A car.

Furthermore, we have instructed every Ford dealer to give the following Free Inspection at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles:

Check battery
Check generator charging rate
Check distributor adjustment
Check carburetor adjustment
Check lights
Check brakes
Check shock absorber adjustment
Check tire inflation
Check steering gear
Change engine oil
Lubricate chassis

No charge is made for labor or materials incidental to this service, except, of course, where repairs are necessary through accident, misuse or neglect. The only charge is for new oil.

See your Ford dealer, therefore, and get this Free Inspection of your new car at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. Find out, too, how little it will cost to have your car given a thorough going-over at regular periods thereafter.

A periodic checking-up, together with oiling and greasing every 500 miles, will add months and years to the life of your car and mean more economical and pleasurable motoring every mile you drive.

TRUCK, CAR MEET ON 13TH STREET

Truck Overtakes in Ditch as Car Jumps Ditch and Goes Over Embankment

NO SERIOUS INJURIES

Peter Wolvert Driver of Car Claims Lights of Approaching Truck Blinded Him

A truck and a car came together on 13th street last evening, the truck overturning in the ditch and the car hurdling the ditch and coming to a stop in a farmers field after climbing a four foot bank.

No serious injuries resulted from the crash. The truck, a Whippet was driven by Louis Wiedl and the car a Buick touring was driven by Peter Wolvert.

Wiedl was driving to Brainerd and Wolvert was going south. Wolvert claims the lights of the approaching truck blinded him. The truck received a damaged fender, and one of the wheels was torn off. The Wolvert car was also damaged.

Mr. Wiedl received scratches while Mrs. Wiedl had her back strained. She is at present under physician's care.

60 CIVIL CASES ON CALENDAR

Criminal Cases at District Court Will be Light; County Attorney Announces

The district court calendar sent today to the printers will list 60 civil cases, ten of which are continued cases. In addition there will be 38 cases of non payment of motor vehicles taxes and 15 for non payment of personal property taxes.

County Attorney Arthur J. Sullivan announced today that the criminal calendar would be light. He was preparing his cases for entry today.

POLICE HOLD TWO DOGS

Two Playful Spaniels to be Shot Unless Immediately Claimed by Owners

Two spaniel dogs were having the time of their young lives today in the basement of the city hall, jumping high in the air, playfully biting each other, rolling over and squirming with delight when anyone visited them.

But unless claimed within a few days police will be forced to shoot them. The one is a golden cocker spaniel with white spots on its head and the other is a brown water spaniel. The two were picked up for not having tags.

DAGGETT BROOK

Miss Hannah Linn was unable to teach school Friday because of illness. We hope she is soon better.

Mrs. Clarence Englehart and children visited at the James home last Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Earl Miller and children spent a few days this week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Ringering.

Miss Mildred Vanderwerker spent the week end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Vanderwerker. Mildred is attending high school in Brainerd.

Miss Helen Moore and Miss Mary Chase, who have been holding Bible studies at the District No. 18 school house, concluded their studies Saturday night, and left Sunday morning for Bemidji and Hibbing.

Rev. N. P. Olmsted of Brainerd spoke at the school house last Sunday night. He is to speak here again in two weeks from last Sunday night and we hope there will be a larger crowd than there was at this last meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wallentine and family were callers at Jack Lamont's Sunday.

Ruth Houge and Orville Oas visited at the N. Nelson home at Brainerd Sunday afternoon.

YOUTH COMMITTED TO RED WING

Minneapolis Boy Who Lead Huckleberry Finn Life Sent to School

BROKE INTO COTTAGE

Testimony Showed That Youth Lived in Woods, Eating Whenever Possible

A 15 year old Minneapolis boy who lived a Huckleberry Finn existence was committed to the school for boys at Red Wing Monday from juvenile court here after testimony was received which showed the youth guilty of breaking into a summer cottage at Mille Lacs Lake recently and stealing property.

His parents divorced, his father disappearing and his mother remarrying, the boy went to make his home with a grandmother in Minneapolis. He craved excitement in new fields with the result that he skipped school on several occasions, disappearing from his home. During these trips he pictured himself a knight of the roads, seeking adventure. He would sleep in the woods and eat where he could.

The wanderlust seized him this fall so he started northwest from Minneapolis. He joined three young men at Mille Lacs Lake and the party lived by securing food wherever possible. At one time three chickens were stolen from a farmyard and a feast was had in the woods, the testimony showed. The four slept in barns until complaints were made to the county sheriff's department. Before arrests were possible.

sible, two of the boys left for North Dakota and the other two were arrested. One of the boys is now in jail awaiting trial in district court for breaking into a cottage.

A representative of the Children's Protective Society of Minneapolis came to Brainerd while the youth was held here on behalf of the boy but on hearing the evidence waived the right to return the youth to Minneapolis.

Every purchaser of a new Ford
is entitled to Free Inspection Service
for the first 1500 miles

THE modern automobile is a finely built piece of machinery and it will stand a lot of abuse. Considering the work it does, it gives surprisingly little trouble. But there isn't a car made that will not run better and longer if given proper care.

The first few hundred miles are especially important because that is when the mechanism of your car is being broken in. Proper attention during this period will lengthen its life and prevent unnecessary trouble later on.

We are particularly interested in this matter because we believe it is our duty not only to make a good automobile, but to help the owner get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

With this in view, the entire Ford dealer organization has been specially trained and equipped to service the new Model A car.

Furthermore, we have instructed every Ford dealer to give the following Free Inspection at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles:

Check battery
Check generator charging rate
Check distributor adjustment
Check carburetor adjustment
Check lights
Check brakes
Check shock absorber adjustment
Check tire inflation
Check steering gear
Change engine oil
Lubricate chassis

No charge is made for labor or materials incidental to this service, except, of course, where repairs are necessary through accident, misuse or neglect. The only charge is for new oil.

See your Ford dealer, therefore, and get this Free Inspection of your new car at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. Find out, too, how little it will cost to have your car given a thorough going-over at regular periods thereafter.

A periodic checking-up, together with oiling and greasing every 500 miles, will add months and years to the life of your car and mean more economical and pleasurable motoring every mile you drive.

PRaises AUXILIARY BAND

"Legionnaire" Tells of Minnesota Advertisers at National Convention

The American Legionnaire, official publication of the Minnesota Departments of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary in its issue of October 17 devotes considerable space to activities of the Minnesota delegations in attendance at the national convention at San Antonio.

Concerning the Brainerd Legion Auxiliary band in attendance, the Legionnaire states:

"The convention high light was the parade, in which the honor of Minnesota was upheld by four, fine uniformed bodies in addition to the individual marchers. Heading the Minnesota section was the William T. McCoy Legion drum corps of Rochester which chartered a special car for the trip and constituted the only Minnesota Legion musical organization at San Antonio.

"But Minnesota had other able advertisers whose presence proves the value of a live Legion Auxiliary. The North Star State was the only one having three Legion Auxiliary musical bodies, the Brainerd Legion Auxiliary band, the Hibbing Legion Auxiliary drum corps, the Minneapolis Auxiliary Glee club. They did themselves proud, not only in the parade but during the trip and through the convention.

"The Brainerd Legion Auxiliary band made a hit when at the Auxiliary convention they played the New Hampshire state song in honor of the national president."

In another column under the heading "Gopherette Sidelights From National Convention," the Legionnaire says:

"The Brainerd Auxiliary band, which marched every step of the long parade, made a decided hit when it marched through the convention hall and played 'Hail to Old New Hampshire.' New Hampshire is the home state of Mrs. Robert Walbridge, outgoing national president. She was much pleased with the tribute."

Peaks of Desire

by Kane O Day

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

JERRY DUNN, star reporter on a large newspaper, covers a garden fete given by Spencer Hayden, a millionaire. There he meets Ann Tremaine, debutante daughter of a wealthy banker, who is engaged to marry Hector Richards, whom she does not love. She becomes interested in Dunn, who is different from the men she has always known, and when he asks her to direct him to Mr. Hayden, she pretends she is a stranger and does not belong there. She tells him she is a working girl and has crashed the party, and he invites her to a speakeasy.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER III.

JERRY DUNN was surprised to find her laughing at him softly.

"You are amusing," she bantered him. "Do you wild reporters make a habit of luring stenographers off to speakeasies?"

"It's a respectable place and it's got the best protection in town," Jerry protested, his pride ruffled. "Furthermore, you needn't think I want to shoot a few drinks into you and then make you a proposition. I never make propositions to young ladies during business hours—and I'm working tonight."

"What's the good of going to a speakeasy if a girl can't depend on the customary proposition?" she asked with a tinge of sophistication that was a bit beyond her usual speed. "Besides, I've been in one or two speakeasies with friends and they seemed awfully grubby and uninteresting with the usual carboic brands of liquor."

"The place I mean is run by a German and serves the best beer in town," he murmured. "However—I'm a two-idea man. We'll get a taxi and ride up a ten dollar bill."

"Object, necking?"

He looked at her and shook his head sorrowfully. "Just because you're young and good looking, do you have to be so damn modern?" he asked. "Listen—when I get fresh with you, you won't be in any doubt about it. Can't you assume—just for once—that a guy might be fed up on the eternal feminine sex appeal?"

"Are you?"

"I think I might manage to resist your charms for quite a while," he said bravely.

"What is it that attracts you, then—my mind?"

"Your mind, if any, is an unknown quality to me," he told her. "No, I'm just a bit lonesome and bored and there's something about you—just something about you that interests me. I don't know what, or why."

"Perhaps," she mocked, "it's love at first sight?"

"Don't try to be clever." His eyes were upon her shrewdly and, despite the lightness of her mood, she had an uneasy sensation that he could and would say things that would make her feel serious, in spite of herself. "You're not clever, really," he went on. "This is a wise-cracking age and you're just trying to keep in step. At a rough guess, I'd say your line ought to be idealism—the noble soul stuff. But that can wait—where do you want to go from here?"

The moon, a stringed orchestra that was beginning softly, distantly in the grounds, worked a magic, unexpected effect upon Ann. She shivered with an uprush of hurt from her heart—not because of what Jerry Dunn had said . . . because she was sorry for herself . . . because she, too, was fed up with something, she didn't know what . . . because she was going to marry Hector Richards and she didn't love him. Marriage would swamp her, swallow her up and there would be nothing more lurking adventurously ahead in life . . . no more moonlight and music and permeating sweetness of roses.

"We're standing here wasting time," Jerry Dunn said.

ly. "I'll be back after a while and I'll find you right here where I left you, won't I?"

"Yes."

"Good girl!"

He was gone and in his absence Ann felt that she had made an utter fool of herself. Why had she been swept away by such a tide of heartbreak? It was humiliating to know that she had revealed it to a stranger, that she had been unable to control herself . . . like a lady . . . he would think she was cheap, common . . . that she wore her heart on her sleeve.

Pride came to her rescue and she began to feel better, even though there was still a ghostlike unhappiness upon her. It had all come over her so suddenly, almost a swooning realization that she was trapped by her own life, by

"Perhaps," she mocked, "it's love at first sight."

It was almost ended now . . . her girlhood. In a matter of months—weeks—it would be all over. Her chance to live and breathe with her soul . . . to stretch out her spirit and be the real person that was hidden underneath her training and money and social position. This might be her last time to stand alone, free and untrammelled, and talk with a man that was different.

"Where are we going to go?" Jerry persisted.

A mist came into her eyes. "To hell, I suppose," she said. She didn't speak the words voluntarily—they just came out.

He looked at her, his reporter's eyes galvanizing instantly.

"Here—you wait over here."

He led her under a tree where branches brushed her cheeks and the night was dusky with shadows; there was a rustic bench and a tangle of flowers that were sleeping in the night, their breath perfumed strange and sweet.

"You wait here while I dig up some of the Haydens and get the notes on my story," he said softly.

her family and friends and the love and desire of Hector. Richardson. Steeped in the whole fluid of social life she had uttered one despairing cry before she went under . . . and there had been someone, a stranger, a man who had risen up out of nowhere to hear her cry!

Before she thought it possible he had returned.

"Come on—we'll get out of here now."

She didn't ask him where he was going to take her. It didn't matter. A vague prompting of conscience told her she shouldn't be slipping away from Hector Richardson; he'd be worried about her. He was a nice boy . . . it was a harsh, ungracious trick to slip away from him like this.

She knew though, in her heart, that she didn't care; Hector's immediate feelings were entirely trivial compared with the strange churning in her heart.

Jerry Dunn stood before her as she arose; she slipped her hand through his arm and let herself be taken away.

Students Held in Thrill Murder

Facing death in electric chair with nonchalance, George Harsh (with automatic in hand) and Richard Gallogly (right), 19 and 18-year-old students at Oglethorpe university, near Atlanta, Ga., confessed to Detective Chief Lamar Poole (left), that they had perpetrated a series of holdups which were climaxed by killing of two men for thrills of the Loeb-Leopold variety.
